New AEF Spurs Talk of Invasion

HUGE FORCE LANDS SAFELY IN IRELAND

Fully Equipped Tank Squads Among Powerful Units That Cross Atlantic.

DEBARKATION SPEEDY

U. S. Troops Expected to Take Over Defense Area and Prepare For Thrust.

(By International News Service)

WITH THE UNITED STATES ARMY IN NORTHERN IRELAND—Thousands of additional American doughboys took up posts in Northern Ireland today following the safe arrival of every man in the largest expeditionary force sent to Europe from the United States since the last war.

The powerful units of American combat forces, including fully equipped tank squads, are expected gradually to take over a large part of the defense of Northern Ireland, it was learned from a high U. S. military authority.

The appearance here of the new A. E. F., with its troops numbering high in the thousands, and recent utterances of General George C. Marshall, chief of staff of the U. S. army, make it plain that the job of the Americans not only is to hold northern Ireland against a possible German invasion, but also that this theater will be used for completion of training and as an advanced base from which an offensive can be launched against the Axis when the time comes.

The perilous crossing of the Atlantic, infested with Nazi U-boats, was accomplished without the loss of a single man under protection of escort units of the Atlantic fleet.

The fighting equipment brought by these thousands of troops included heavily armored high speed tanks—the newest Uncle Sam has been able to produce—armored cars and field guns of various calibers.

One of the most spectacular features of the landing of the forces was the unloading at the docks of a powerful armored force comprising one of America's most famous tank units. Among them were numerous tanks similar to Revives Hope For Airport Aid From U. S.

Senate Group Favors $199,740,000 Program For Air Fields.

Hopes were revived in aviation circles here today by the announcement in Washington that the senate appropriations committee had recommended a $199,740,000 airport development program.

The committee's proposals involves the development of 164 new airports and the improvement of 266 existing fields.

Also included were funds to complete certain landing fields in Alaska and to provide the army ferry command with new landing fields in the United States.

The airport program accounted for the bulk of $204,625,135 net increases proposed by the committee in the annual appropriation bill for the department of state, justice and commerce and the federal judiciary for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

In addition to the landing fields funds the committee voted $3,675,000 for establishment of air navigation facilities and $19,000,000 for certain airport paving projects.

These increases were made in the appropriation for the administrator of civil aeronautics for the army air corps program.

It was pointed out in Washington that committee conferences will now be held with secretaries of war, navy and interior, to determine what fields will be included for improvements.

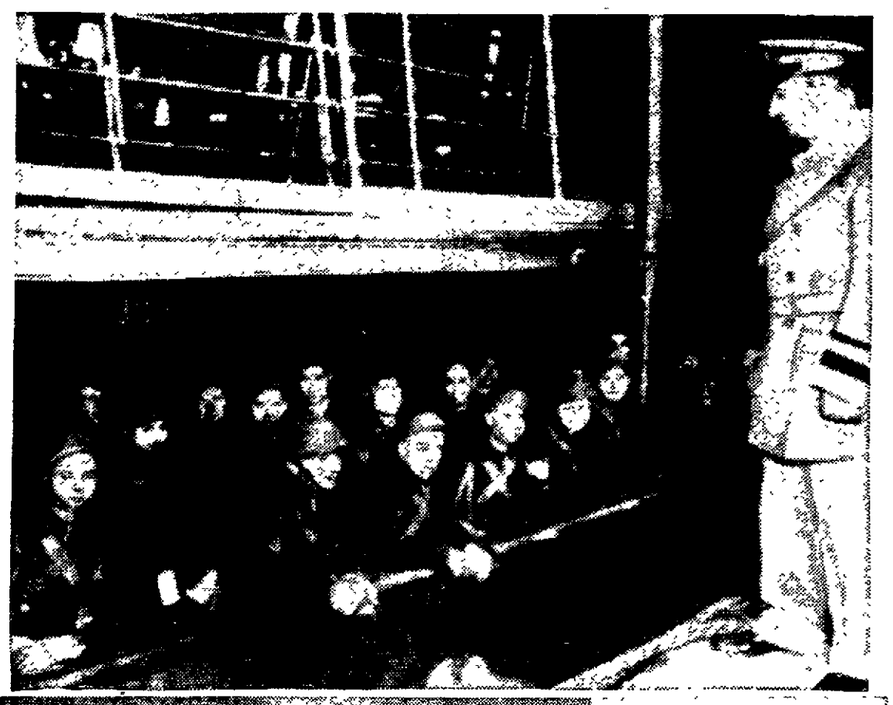
Airmen here were of the opinion that Mansfield may be in line for major improvements since the government recently placed fliers enrolled in the Civilian Pilot training program at the port on a reserve military status.

Being a training center for flying instructors for the armed services, it was believed that the port may be given priority over other privately maintained ports in Ohio.

Airport Manager James R Harrington said the proposal might be similar to the improvements recommended here by the Civil Aeronautics board a year and a half ago which would have involved the expenditure of $185,000.

At that time, the government planned to spend $133,000 for putting down hard-surfaced runways that would allow for landings and takeoffs the year around. The port is now closed to flying during spring and late fall when runways become boggy.

Hartle Greets Largest AEF At Irish Port



Major General Russell P. Hartle, commander of American troops in North Ireland, is shown at top in a Central Press radiophoto greeting the first contingent of the largest and most powerful force of United States fighting men dispatched to Europe in this war. The scene is a north Ireland port. Picture at lower left is an American troopship, part of an Atlantic convoy, seen dimly through an early morning mist. The ship shown could have been part of the most recent convoy. At lower right, a steel-helmeted sailor keeps a sharp lookout for enemy submarines and planes. Not a ship nor a man was lost in the record convoy, keeping the navy's perfect record intact.

JAPS PREPARE ALL-OUT DRIVE AGAINST CHINA

Chungking Says Nation Faces Grave Danger as Enemy Gets Reinforcements.

CALLS FOR ALLIED AID

Spokesman Declares Japan Has 500 Planes In Burma Area

(By United Press)

CHUNGKING—A Chungking government spokesman warned the United Nations today that Japan is on the verge of an all-out offensive against China as the next step in her ruthless campaign of Asiatic expansion.

Although new Chinese defensive successes were reported in southwestern Yunnan province and eastern Burma, the spokesman described China's outlook for the immediate future as "very grave."

"We need all possible help from our friends," he said. "They must send their help to China with utmost urgency. Otherwise, they will have to pay double and triple for every counter-action."

The spokesman warned that the Japanese were hurling new reinforcements into eastern Burma's Shan states in an attempt to wipe out pockets of Chinese resistance which threaten to disrupt Japan's time-table.

"During the next few weeks," he said, "we will be seeing more bloody battles in Burma and along the Yunnan border."

His reference to the Yunnan border area included that territory along the Burma road where the latest Japanese advance has been halted along the steep banks of the Salween river. The remnants of one Japanese spearhead have been battered back to Lunglng, 40 miles inside the border, a communique revealed.

The first official admission of the gravity of Free China's position, coincided with a disclosure from military headquarters that Chinese units were attacking the Japanese-held city of Tengyueh, 40 miles northwest of Lungling.

A military spokesman said the Chinese had crossed the Salween, and recaptured several points on the west bank. Yungchang (Paoshan), 100 miles inside the China frontier, was "out of danger," he said.

"Five hundred Japanese planes now are operating in the Burma area and the enemy's land troops in Burma have been further reinforced—probably for an all-out invasion of China," the spokesman declared.

China, he said, needed princi-

Describes Internment Camp Life

Writer Says Americans Got Fair Food, Had Own 'University.'

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER

LISBON —(AP)— Americans interned for five months at Bad Nauheim ate considerably better than the average German but still we lost weight and felt the effects of insufficient diet.

German officials said our rations were half again as large as German allotments—and these were supplemented from our own sources.

This showed us how tightly the Germans have pulled in their belts. Had we remained longer there might have been grave health problems. Our American doctors in the group of 132 prisoners found losses of as much as 35 pounds in extreme cases and average losses of 10 pounds for men and 6.7 pounds for women.

German physicians consulted for various infections ascribed these to diet deficiencies.

We had only two hospital cases and relatively few ailments needing medical attention. But it is doubtful whether that would have been the situation without the hardening regime insisted upon by the military attache group.

Throughout the coldest winter days, in rain or shine, two officers put the men and women through calisthenics and in the spring organized softball teams.

The German fare lacked tea and coffee.

Two days weekly were meatless and two days offered only so-called feldkeuche, a one-course dish of soup with one piece of meat. Fruit was scant. Eggs seldom were served.

Our housing was elegant but we had no freedom.

NAZIS THROW SAILORS INTO BITTER FIGHT

ATTACK SUPPLY ROAD

Enemy Puts Up Resistance Along Important Route Through Ukraine.

BULLETIN

LONDON — (U.P.) — Marshal Semyon Timoshenko's Russian forces today were reported battling for possession of a highway junction controlling the main roads from Kharkov after driving a deep wedge in the German defenses before the city.

(By International News Service)

MOSCOW — While a desperate German high command flung 40,000 sailors into the battle lines at Kharkov in an effort to stem the Russian advance, the onrushing troops of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko today captured a large inhabited locality and launched a new drive against a strategic main road connecting two towns in the area.

With all important first lines of Nazi defense definitely smashed, German and Rumanian troops now are retreating in "great disorder," the usually conservative army newspaper Red Star said.

In an attempt to hurl back the onrushing Soviet troops and tanks, the Germans threw 150 tanks into a savage counter-attack on one two and a half mile sector of the front. On other sectors tank masses of 100, 80 and 50 were thrown against the Russians in rapid succession.

All these attacks were repelled. In the unidentified locality recaptured, the Germans "broke" after ineffectual counter-attacks, Red Star said, abandoning a tremendous amount of equipment and suffering heaviest losses in man-power.

Russian forces were reported encountering still resistance in the battle for the road, however.

The Germans poured in all their available resources to defend the highway, one of the most important supply routes in the Ukraine. Timoshenko's forces were reported pressing the Nazis steadily toward the west.

In addition to using sailors to bolster the Kharkov defense, the Germans are throwing into combat infantry forces consisting of boys of only 18 or 19, who are said to crack up speedily under

LUXURY LINER SUNK BY JAPS

Canadians Reveal Loss of 'Empress of Asia' Off Singapore.

MONTREAL —(U.P.)— The Empress of Asia, one of Canada's most luxurious pre-war liners, was sunk off Singapore last February while transporting troops to the Far East, the Canadian Pacific Steamship company disclosed today.

The ship sank after a heavy attack by Japanese bombers and 19 persons aboard were believed lost, the company said.

Before the war the liner was on the Vancouver-Orient service.

The company announcement said the admiralty had given permission to disclose the sinking.

The Empress of Asia, 16,909 tons, was built at Glasgow in 1913. It was 570 feet long.

Mayor Says War Transportation Plan Not His Task; Kalbfleisch Assumes It.

The problem of obtaining civilian cooperation in the tire conservation campaign rested in the lap of Judge G. E Kalbfleisch today after the judge thought the program was being handled by Mayor W. J. Locke.

Learning that Mayor Locke, who receives all literature on the campaign from state civilian defense headquarters, had denied participation in the program, Judge Kalbfleisch, chairman of Mansfield's civilian defense committee, said he would assume the responsibility for carrying out the campaign.

The confusion arose when Mayor Locke said this morning that he had turned the campaign

Tells How Fighting Ships Kept Subs Away From Convoy

By JOHN HENRY

(INS Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE UNITED STATES ATLANTIC FLEET, AT A NORTHERN IRELAND PORT—German submarines whose commanders had become aware of the latest movement of American soldiers and supplies on Atlantic waters dogged the huge convoy on its circuitous route to Northern Ireland, but the U-boats were helpless because of the strong protection afforded by a task force of the United States Atlantic fleet.

In Northern Ireland today every soldier is safe and sound, thanks to the task force which enabled the transports and cargo vessels to slice their way through the prowling packs of enemy submarines.

The crossing had hardly got under way when the enemy spotted the convoy. The first contact occurred the day after start of the operation.

When the enemy was discovered, there was an explosion followed by ship-rattling thuds—the first of a series of depth charges. That was the beginning of attacks against U-boats that were to mark nearly every day of the perilous voyage.

The destroyer carrying this correspondent soon swung into action.

"Contact to port," shouted anxious-faced lookouts.

Orders were barked from the

GETS REPORTS

FDR Seeks Quickest Way To Relieve Oil Shortage.

WASHINGTON —(U.P.)— President Roosevelt today receives reports from three war agencies on the quickest and best way to relieve the East coast oil shortage.

He told his legislative conference yesterday that he had directed War Production Board Chairman Donald Nelson, Petroleum Co-ordinator Harold L. Ickes and Price Administrator Leon Henderson to make a report to him "within 24 hours."

Mr. Roosevelt, it was learned, assured the congressional leaders that he is determined to find a way of supplying the East coast with quantities of gasoline and fuel oil approaching the amount that was moved to that area by tankers prior to the war.

The president personally favors immediate relief to the East coast through operation of barges on inland waterways that link New Jersey with Florida ports.

TAFT VOTES 'NO'

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Senator Robert A. Taft, (R-Ohio) voted against an amendment increasing from $25,319,000 to $50,319,000 the cash appropriation for rural rehabilitation loans and grants. The senate approved the amendment.

FAVORS $42

Administration Leans Toward Lower Service Pay Boost.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— Congressional leaders were advised today that the administration favors the senate-approved $42 a month minimum pay bill for army and navy enlisted men over the house proposal of $50 a month.

This word came as Rep. May (D., Ky.) chairman of the house military affairs committee—anxious to "get those boys' pay to them" — declared himself ready to tackle the conference battle on army-navy pay increases as soon as possible.

But just when the five senate conferees would sit down with May and his four house conference committee members was uncertain.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.—(INS)— A drive for the return of prohibition for the duration of the war was underway today with the Women's Missionary organizations of the Presbyterian church acting as spearhead.

Strike Of Warren Utility Workers Held In Abeyance

WARREN, O. —(AP)— The CIO utility workers' organizing committee held in abeyance for not more than four days a strike called for today at the Warren plant of the Ohio Public Service company. Public Service feeds current to steel mills and the Ravenna shell-loading plant.

Spokesmen for the union said it was decided "not to shut off war production if there was any possibility of a peaceful settlement." However, company officials had said earlier that service would be supplied even if a strike were called.

The company has refused to negotiate with the union on the contention it did not represent a majority of the employes.

The NLRB recently certified the union as sole bargaining agent following an election in which 12 ballots were void and four contested. The remaining gave the CIO 57 votes and an AFL union 45. The company claimed the 58 CIO votes should be figured in ratio to the total 119 voting, and thus the CIO total was not a majority.

DAHLGREN SOLD

Chicago Cubs' First Baseman Goes To Brooklyn.

CHICAGO—(AP)—First Baseman Babe Dahlgren was sold by the Chicago Cubs to Brooklyn today, General Manager Jim Gallagher of the Cubs announced.

The Cubs sold Dahlgren to the St. Louis Browns last week but the Brownies returned him to Chicago because of a disagreement over terms concerning the first baseman's possible entry into the nation's armed forces.

PAJAMAS NEXT

WPB Turns 'Saving Scissors' to Men's Night Clothing.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—The war production board today turned its scissors on men's pajamas in the effort to save cloth. Clothing officials told an industry advisory committee that a few inches could be taken off here and there to conserve thousands of yards of material.

The WPB also suggested changes in styles, restricting pajamas to possibly only three forms. The styles were believed to be a collarless sleeping coat, a surplice coat which buttons in the front, and a "collarless sleeping coat." The latter was the WPB's phrase for the old-fashioned nightgown.

If the suggestions are adopted, cloth would be saved by the elimination of collars, lapels, cuffs, pockets, coat sashes, and linings.

Congressman Raps Press, Radio For News Presentation

AUGUSTA, Ga. —(AP)— The nation's press and radio are failing to present facts to the public in a fair way, Rep. Robert Ramspeck (D-Ga) said in an address before the Georgia Postmasters association.

Ramspeck, addressing a banquet last night, charged that there is a lack of information coming to the public through news agencies and added they are doing some "rotten reporting on what is going on on Capitol Hill."

He said he didn't mean that the press agencies were failing on the "military side or other matters of censorship, but facts are not presented to the public in a fair way."

"They are undermining the faith of the people in our Democratic form of government," he asserted, "and if that democracy is destroyed, then so will the free press be destroyed."

Calls Empire Union-Management Plan 'Model' for Plants In Rest of Nation

Labor Officials Claim War Board Using Its Principles.

A management-labor committee program first used at Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company of Mansfield, was credited today by Steel Workers' Organizing Committee officials with having tided the firm over a trying period and was described by them as the model for similar programs later used in other plants.

SWOC officials, in a report to the union's constitutional convention in Cleveland, said the plan used here established a "proving ground" for union-management co-operation in other plants, and that labor-management committees set up by the War Production Board incorporate principles of the plan.

The WPB's labor-management committees incorporate principles of the program first used here, the union officials said.

Four years ago it appeared that Empire would have to cease operations, the report stated. In bankruptcy a few years previously, the company in 1938 was in a weakened financial condition due to heavy 1937 losses, reduction of sheet steel prices, and abolition of the "Pittsburgh plus" pricing system, it was stated.

The Empire local sought the advice of the SWOC, the report said.

REDS ROLL ON NEAR KHARKOV, ATTACK ROAD

Claim German Lines Broken, Admit Resistance on Supply Highway.

Russian pressure unless strongly supported by mechanized units.

The new German tactics of using trailers filled with troops dragged along by tanks have failed, it was said. Russian war planes and anti-tank guns simply put the enemy tanks out of action, which leave the trailer-borne troops comparatively helpless.

It is impossible to define accurately the front or to say how close the Red army is to Kharkov, because of the fluid character of the fighting. Tanks and Cossack cavalry are contributing to the mobile character of the warfare.

The Soviets undoubtedly have made deep penetrations in many sectors, pressing ahead and bypassing many strong points which will be mopped up later.

It was declared that the German 208th infantry regiment had received orders to defend a railroad junction to the last man, but finally fled before savage Russian attacks after most of their number had been annihilated.

Military observers are commenting on the frequent mentions of cavalry units in official dispatches

Yesterday the hard-riding Cossacks were said to have forded a river after all the bridges were blown up and, advancing in the face of heavy fire, to have driven back the Germans from the opposite bank.

The Moscow radio said that 40,000 German sailors had been sent to the front while former Luftwaffe bombers were being transferred to the infantry.

General Field Marshal Fedor von Bock was reported to be making every effort to mobilize his forces to maximum strength for a counter-offensive.

The armies of Marshal Semyon Timoshenko continued to gain, however, all along the arc shaped front from Volchansk to Krasnograd despite the stubborn attempts of the Germans to halt the offensive

"Offensive fighting continues in the Kharkov sector and the Russians still are advancing," the Red army high command announced.

In a supplement to the regular communique it was said that Soviet tanks had dislodged the Nazis from an important inhabited locality on one sector of the Kharkov front.

The Russians reported also that intense fighting still was in progress on the Kerch peninsula where the Germans are trying to gain full control for an attempt to cross the Kerch straits into the oil-rich Caucasus.

The Russians said that 500 German tanks and 600 Nazi guns had been destroyed in seven days of fighting around Kharkov.

All along the 100-mile front before Kharkov, important industrial and communications center in the Ukraine, the Russians were recapturing village after village.

Moscow acknowledged that the Germans were increasing their resistance, pouring in numerous tank reserves, but said the Nazis were unable to prevent new advances.

Nazis Admit Kerch Battle Continues

BERLIN—(By Official German Wireless)—(INS)—Despite previous announcements that Russian resistance on the Kerch peninsula had ended, the German high command admitted today that the battle is not yet over.

An official communique said, "Destruction of the last remnants of the enemy on the Kerch peninsula is imminent."

On the Kharkov front, the communique said, new attacks by massed Soviet forces were repulsed with heavy losses A total of 447 Russian tanks has now been destroyed, it was said

Italians Put Nazis On Spot With Claims

BERN, Switzerland—(AP)—A renewed outburst of Italian press agitation for French territories as a reward for Italian participation in the war has confronted Germany with a grave political problem

"Nice Savoia Corsica, Tunisia" was the clamor of Fascist crowds before the war but none of these claims has yet been recognized. The present insistence of the Italian press that at least some of these territories be turned over now is the strongest since the armistice was signed in 1940.

At the same time, adding to Germany's problems, are similar territorial squabbles between Rumania and Hungary, and between Spain and France.

Foreign observers believe that formal representations already have been made by Italy and that a showdown may come within two weeks.

Spain, acting more quietly through her ambassador, Jose Felix LeQuerica, is believed to have discussed with Pierre Laval, chief of government at Vichy, the question of Morocco.

Rumania is keeping up a steady propaganda by press, radio and speeches to regain Transylvania, ceded to Hungary in 1940 by the Axis award of Vienna.

Italy's position is that she has hard luck in Africa, is still battling hard against guerilla insurgents in Yugoslavia, and that if the Italian people are to go on fighting they must have visible evidence of some gain.

those which have proved their ability against the Germans on the deserts of Libya.

The American units brought new type helmets which were seen for the first time among U. S. troops in this area The helmets are similar to the German battle helmets. Also making its first appearance was a new type square pack.

As the forces streamed ashore they were welcomed by Major General Russell P. Hartle, commander of the American troops in this sector, and his staff.

Another group of the Harvard nursing unit and additional Red Cross personnel arrived with the troops.

Landing operations were carried out with such speed, order and precision that one high British official declared it was the "swiftest troop debarkation I have ever witnessed."

The new reinforcements include a large percentage of men from the corn and wheat belts of America, clear eyed, husky and fighting fit.

The first man to step ashore was Marvin H. O'Neal, of Philips, South Dakota. He is an Irish-American youngster who drove a truck in civilian life before the war.

Debate Emphasizes Second Front Need

LONDON—(U.P.)—The importance of opening a second front with a "great attack on the enemy in the west" and an invasion that will "go through to stay," was emphasized today in the opening phase of a two-day war debate in the house of commons.

Deputy Prime Minister Clement R. Attlee emphasized that Allied strength was increasing every month (more American troops have arrived in North Ireland) but he declined to make any prophesy in regard to when or how a second front might be opened.

Arthur Greenwood, Laborite, said the Allied blows in the west must be harder than the recent commando raids.

"What the people wish to know is that the government is determined to deliver a second attack on the enemy in the west," Greenwood said.

"A second front is a deliberate attempt at invasion of territories held by the enemy. When we do gain a foothold on the continent next time, we must go through to stay and strengthen our hold on the territories now over run by Hitler."

Atlee told commons that the Japanese had suffered a severe check in the battle of the Coral sea and that Britain would run any risk to aid Australia, but he declined to be specific about a second front in Europe other than to say that "we shall change... to the offensive."

Peanut Gets 1-A Priority Rating In Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(INS)—The lowly peanut has been given a 1-A priority rating in Louisiana

A warning to "go easy on the goobers" was issued to students of Louisiana State university recently in a war-time oil conservation move announced by G J. Durbin state AAA administrator.

"Heretofore, we've used coconut and palm oils," Durbin said, "but the war has cut off our supply from the Dutch East Indies, and we must turn to domestic products."

Once the program is under way Durbin predicted that Americans will be using peanut oils in such everyday tasks as baking a cake, taking a bath, or varnishing a floor

By refining peanut oil, a fairly good grade of motor fuel may be extracted, Durbin said, adding that he did not believe the time will ever come when this will be practical

UNITED NATIONS HEADQUARTERS IN AUSTRALIA—(INS)—Two Japanese transports were blasted and probably sent to the bottom when United Nations fliers attacked enemy shipping in the Bay of Kupang, Dutch Timor, Gen. Douglas MacArthur announced today as the air tug-of-war over territories north of Australia was reopened with grim ferocity.

The Japs countered by sending a large force of 49 planes to raid the advanced United Nations base at Port Moresby, New Guinea.

The blows and counter-blows followed several days of comparative inactivity.

Japan sent 34 bombers and 15 Zero fighters into the Port Moresby attack. The assault accomplished little and cost the Japs one bomber and three fighters when they were intercepted. It was believed three other bombers may have been destroyed.

Damage to military installations at Port Moresby was negligible, the communique said.

Both the Kupang bay and Port Moresby attacks took place yesterday. The probable sinking of the Jap transports brought the most conclusive victory of the day.

The attacks by American and Australian fliers against Timor emphasized the importance attached to that enemy base by Gen. MacArthur's command. The unceasing blasts against Port Moresby likewise stress its menace to the Japanese northern bases.

RAF Planes Resume Attacks In Burma

NEW DELHI, India—(U.P.)—Royal Air Force planes, resuming attacks on Japanese positions in western Burma, bombed Akyab on the Bay of Bengal and strafed enemy barges and river boats in the Chindwin river area yesterday, an India command communique said today.

The attacks along the Chindwin centered in the area north of Kalewa, about 40 miles from the Indian frontier, along the route followed by British imperial forces in their retreat toward Assam State.

It was the second straight day the British planes had attacked Japanese barges and river boats along the Chindwin.

CO-ED BECOMES MORE SERIOUS

Professor at University of Georgia Says Girls Today Surpass Grandmothers.

(By United Press)

ATHENS, Ga.—The co-ed of today is more serious than her prototype of a generation ago.

At least that's the conclusion reached by Dr. Joseph B. Gittler, associate professor of sociology at the University of Georgia, in his forthcoming book "From Pinafore to Mortarboard."

According to Dr. Gittler, the college co-ed has passed through three different stages. First she was the prim and tailored champion of emancipation and suffrage. Then with the roaring twenties she was a short-skirted lass with a flask in her pocketbook and no objection to "petting."

But the college girl of today has world problems, psychology, science, journalism, and "getting a job" on her mind.

Dr. Gittler said that today's co-ed wears "a definite Monday-to-Friday attire which stamps her immediately." According to the sociologist you can set a girl off as a co-ed if she's wearing dirty white saddle oxfords, socks, sloppy sweaters with sleeves pushed up to the elbows, and a single strand of pearls.

Cites Need for More Stringent Gunnery Rules

PHILADELPHIA—(INS)—What with every man and his brother blazing away at targets in a flurry of patriotic fervor, Lansing McCurley thinks stricter safety regulations should be clamped on gunnery immediately.

"Guns are never safe in the hands of civilians," declared McCurley, district rifle director for the OCD. "Even a man used to handling them will slip once in a while and if the gun isn't pointed the right way, someone may get killed.

"It is my personal belief," he said, "that hunters should be forced to prove ability to use arms before being licensed, and that licenses should be issued at recognized rifle and gun clubs rather than at stores.

"What's more I don't think this is any time for pleasure shooting," asserted McCurley. "With ammunition so scarce and in military demand, there is no reason for it being wasted for pleasure."

over to Judge Kalbfleisch but at the same time Judge Kalbfleisch said that Mayor Locke had informed him that he (the mayor) would confer with Mansfield labor leaders to obtain the cooperation of industrial workers in a "swap-ride" program.

The industrial committee, which Kalbfleisch said he expects to announce shortly, will contact workers in Mansfield plants in an effort to get them to team up while riding to and from work to save automobile tires. Workers living near plants will be asked to walk to work.

Mayor Locke attended a state forum of mayors on tire conservation in Columbus recently and upon his return said that he did not believe the city needed an industrial tire conservation committee at present. Letters from state headquarters during the past week, however, requested the formation of the committee.

Locke said this morning that he was not handling the campaign and referred questioners to Judge Kalbfleisch, who has directed Mansfield's entire civilian defense program since its establishment several months ago

In most Ohio cities, the mayors have assumed chairmanship of the civilian defense committees, it was learned, however.

TOLL HITS 5 IN MINE BLAST

Two More Miners Die Following West Virginia Explosion.

McMECHEN, W. Va.—(AP)—The toll of an explosion in the Hitchman Coal and Coke company mine rose to five with the death of two miners today. They were Albert Valenbois, 27, and Dan Polis, 22.

Three men were killed outright and 10 others escaped as the blast shook this region early yesterday. They were cleaning up a fall of stone 2½ miles from the mine entrance.

While no official report has been issued, observers believed an accumulation of gas caused the blast. There was no fire.

BAN ON PARKING WRONG, COUNCIL REVISION DUE

Orange Street Residents Get Tickets as Law Curbs All Parking, Not 2-Hour.

Through some mix-up in the preparation of legislation for city council and possibly through the inattentiveness of council itself when new legislation was being read, residents along Orange street found themselves today without any place to park their automobiles.

The residents, petitioned council two months ago to restrict parking on their street to two hours between 7 a. m. and 7 p. m.

The petition was read and council ordered that legislation embodying the request be prepared. On March 3, council passed the ordinance.

Then residents along Orange street found that they and their friends coming to visit them were getting those little familiar yellow tickets which inform motorists of traffic violations.

Councilman Fred Miller was contacted and when he investigated, he learned that council had unwittingly prohibited parking at any time on either side of Orange street rather than just limiting it to two-hour periods.

Councilman Miller is having City Solicitor L. K. Wagner draw up legislation to repeal the first ordinance and to substitute the two-hour parking limit and will present it at city council's next meeting June 2.

CAPT. BENNION MORMON HERO

Commander of U. S. Battleship Dies Amid Glory at Pearl Harbor.

(By United Press)

SALT LAKE CITY—A son of Utah, whose forbears marched across the plains with handcart has become the outstanding Mormon hero of modern times because of his role in the Battle of Pearl Harbor.

To the hundreds of thousands of Latter Day Saints in Utah and Idaho, no member of America's fighting forces has attained greater glory than Captain Mervyn S. Bennion, commander of the battleship West Virginia.

Bennion—a son-in-law of one of the church's highest leaders — remained on the bridge of the West Virginia until he was forcibly carried below, although shrapnel had torn his stomach and inflicted mortal wounds.

His heroic action won a posthumous award of the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Bennion, a veteran navy man who privately had believed for many years that a Japanese attack on our defenses was inevitable, was married to the daughter of J. Reuben Clark, jr., first counselor in the first presidency of the LDS church. He was a member of one of the prominent Mormon families, and was respected highly in Utah among Mormons and non-Mormons alike.

Church members saw in his heroic conduct a modern exemplification of the stalwart qualities which the pioneers displayed in their conquest of the great Salt Desert and their battles with intolerance and persecution.

RADIUM FINDER HAS A SYSTEM

Professor Uses Electroscope to Detect Valuable Mineral.

(By United Press)

NORMAN, Okla.—Prof. William Schriever of the University of Oklahoma Physics department, is a proven needle-in-the-haystack finder.

He guarantees his work, with one provision—the needle must be platinum, containing radium. Doctors use such needles in their profession, and they are worth upwards of $500.

The professor will tell you about the time he found two such needles in the vast Oklahoma City trash dump. The procedure was simple—if you are a professor of physics.

You see, radium is a radioactive element which disintegrates spontaneously giving off alpha, beta and gamma rays. The gamma rays ionize the air, and there lies the secret of the success of Prof. Schriever's needle hunting.

The professor took an electroscope to the dump and began a tour, watching the instrument for traces of electricity. Soon he had the locality of the needles narrowed down to a 5-foot area.

Then the professor began to dig, putting the trash into baskets. With the electroscope he examined each basket and found the one containing the radium. The contents of the basket were then divided into smaller and smaller amounts until finally Prof. Schriever held a handful of dirt. There were the needles.

Prof. Schriever will also tell you of 12 other hunts in which he recovered $11,000 worth of radium needles.

MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, MAY 19, 1942.

Any old time gardener will tell inexperienced enthusiasts that seed catalogs always omit the weeds.

There are still a few persons who seem to think that playing marble machines is a sufficient contribution to the war effort.

One good old custom that is on its way out: the practice of the youth of the family taking Dad's car for a jaunt on Saturday night.

Nearing War Production Peak

VARIOUS elements have contributed to the feeling of greater optimism, in regard to the war situation, which has been noticeable over the country during the past week, and a note of increased confidence has been detected in utterances of spokesmen for the United Nations.

There are indications that the peak of required production of war materials in the United States is being approached and a spokesman for the War Production Board has indicated that contracts for war plants which cannot be completed and in production by the middle of 1943 would be canceled.

According to Donald M. Nelson, chairman of the board, this would mean that approximately two-thirds of all war plant construction approved, or under contract, would be abandoned.

This does not mean that the war has been won, or even that it is near an end, but it does seem to justify belief that available mass production facilities are deemed adequate to meet needs and that construction steel will be saved, to the greatest possible extent, to make munitions instead of going into plant expansion.

It may also mean that a greater effort will be made, from now on, to prevent unnecessary disruption of small industries and businesses and to assure a flow of essential consumer goods through factories and retail outlets—a need that was given little consideration in the first rush of conversion to war requirements.

Despite the frequency of predictions of a victorious end of the war this year, however, there is nothing to be seen in the present situation in Europe or in the Far East to justify such optimism, and the course being wisely pursued in this country and by other allied nations, is to follow war plans designed to carry through 1943 with constantly increasing force, in the hope of preventing hostilities from dragging along for five years, or more, as had been the outlook no more than a few months ago.

Price Uniformity Not Required

THERE'S a danger of confusion in connection with that word, "ceiling", as applied to retail prices, and it will be well for all patrons of retail stores to understand that "ceiling" does not mean uniformity of prices in all stores.

Prices, as heretofore, will continue to vary in different stores and the "ceiling" is merely the highest price that any particular store charged for an article during the month of March—not a standardized price which other retailers must meet.

Retailing will thus continue to be competitive and the fact that an item is sold at a higher, or lower, price in one store than in another cannot be regarded as a violation of the restrictions imposed. If the price is no higher than the same dealer charged in March it is not an overcharge.

Save While the Saving Is Good

THE INCOME of the American people—that is, the payments now being made to individuals in wages, dividends and so on—was at the rate of $106,000,000,000 at the end of March. It may be a billion or two more by this time. And needless to say, it is the most money this nation ever made. In the fat year of 1929 the total was nearly $83,000,000,000. In the ensuing depression it fell to about half that much.

This present, rising income is big money and it cannot last forever. The government, by holding prices down and making war materials instead of consumers' goods, gives people an unusual chance to save. Wise citizens are taking advantage of the opportunity. The best way to save, and to make the savings secure, is to buy war bonds. Homes, too, are good investments.

An Oregon woman, aged 110, has just been to the hospital for a complete medical check-up—and she advises all middle-aged persons to do the same. And there's also the Wisconsin man who gave up farming at the age of 107—because he could see no future in it.

The Knights of Malta were a famous medieval order, but they never fought like the present inhabitants of that island. Every man, woman and child should be knighted now.

Coffee addicts are beginning to notice the hardships of war—since there's no longer a "free" second cup.

Aviation Important In Gas War

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

EFFICIENT gas poisoning, according to Maj. Gen. William N. Porter's war department chemistry bureau, calls for first-class aviation.

Flyers can best spill the deadly fumes down close to the surface of enemy territory, with a minimum of peril to the stuff's disseminators.

A groundling force can squirt or puff it out ahead of 'em, but if the wind sets back their way, its authors may get some of the benefit of it. Furthermore, as they advance, they may run into what's left of it, for it's apt to linger awhile, where sprinkled, unless there's a good bit of atmospheric circulation after it's disposed of to the folk it originally was intended to exterminate.

Airmen, though, scoot right on ahead, high enough up not to snuff any of the tainted ozone and go around that neighborhood, coming back again. Subsequently the groundlings wait a bit and don't push along until conditions, close to the grassroots, aren't so lethal, with the hostile population gone to wherever hostile populations go to.

The subject's a live one, due to threats of a Nazi gas campaign against Russia, to Winston Churchill's promise that Britain will resort to a similar campaign against Germany, if Herr Hitler tries it on the Reds, and to pledges from Washington that Uncle Sam'll gaseously co-operate with John Bull if the Axis does make a weapon of it against the Soviet aggregation.

Accepted Standard.

Just why a man-killing belligerent should consider it all o. k. to slaughter his foemen with lead and shrapnel, but a lousy trick to poison him, never was quite clear to me. Nevertheless, that's been the accepted standard of decency for generations. Now it's intimated that the Axis may abandon it—so far as Russia's concerned, anyway. "Very well," rejoin the democracies, "if the Axis does, WE will."

Now, it isn't asserted that we can concoct any more poison gas than the Germans can. The best we can do will be to be just as poisonous. But we can do that. Our dope's fatal and that's sufficient.

Our decomcratic advantage, if our aviation experts are right, is that we can sprinkle it more capably from overhead, on Germany, than Germany can sprinkle ITS brew on us and the Russians and the rest of the democracies.

Bombs, it seems, can be charged with gaseous gas. The bombs are dropped, the bombs explode, the gas escapes and everybody in the neighborhood snuffs their contents, dying shortly. Or there can be a sprinkling in teeny-weeny fluid drops—presently a fine mist that's inhaled—or the groundling has to quit breathing entirely, which also quickly suffocates him.

Well, the Germans can pull all that kind of activity as well as we can.

Only, from all accounts, we've got 'em licked, in advance, on aviatorial distribution.

Our own and John Bull's aviation experts are so sure that the Nazis recognize this that they'll hesitate to spring gas on the Russians, in the face of our warnings. And yet, they're not so positive, considering the desperate character of the Axis' extremity.

It's agreed that they may raise gas hades in their extermity.

Civilian defense is preparing for suicidal raids by 'em.

Psychological.

It isn't altogether a matter of material damage that it's surmised they'll figure on. A psychology war's being waged also.

Herr Hitler's reckoned on as at the weak end of it.

Italy's blown up. France has frazzled. Overrun Europe is in incipient rebellion. It isn't believed that Japan can last long.

It's almost encouraging to have Adolf talking about air warfare, as a last Nazi resort. It's about the only thing that's left to him. Psychology!

Timely Editorial

They Prefer To Work.

The Social Security Board, from its central office in Washington, conveys the encouraging news that 20,000 persons who are on old-age pension rolls have asked that their names be removed, as they have found jobs. For the duration of the war at least they prefer to be on their own.

Whether or not they may return later to the shelter of the social security act must be left to the future to decide. Moreover, it is reassuring to learn that of approximately 800,000 persons who are eligible to benefits only about 288,000 are on the lists. Half a million men and women more than 65, the board says, have refused to quit work while war is on, determined to help the national effort in any way they can.

The independence of those who continue to work is certainly commendable and sets a fine example Others, equally public spirited, may perhaps be deterred from retiring when they learn what an extremely moderate monthly sum will be available for their maintenance. Amounts so far available for distribution are invitations to frugality.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Lewis Has Set Stage for Battle Against Phil Murray and the CIO

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—John L. Lewis has set the stage for his long expected blow-up with Phil Murray and the CIO.

That's the real purpose behind the special United Mine Worker Policy committee meeting next Monday. Lewis's announcement said the pow-wow would consider vacation and other war problems affecting the union. But that was only window dressing.

Lewis secretly has far more important business up his sleeve. He's bent on venting his fury on Murray and the CIO.

Inside word is that charges of disruption, disloyalty, etc., will be placed against Murray before the policy committee—which is made up overwhelmingly of hand-picked Lewis henchmen. Also that a long list of complaints will be made against the CIO.

Purpose of the two moves will be to lay the foundation for ousting Murray as UMW vice president and for withdrawing the UMW from the CIO.

Murray Supporters.

MURRAY plans to attend the meeting. So does Van A. Bittner, head of UMW District 17, and Pat Fagin, head of UMW district 5, both staunch Murray friends.

Bittner has been in Lewis's bad books since the West Virginian refused to knuckle down and go along with Lewis when he bolted to Wendell Willkie. Several months ago, at a UMW executive board meeting, Lewis instigated an investigation of Bittner by a hand-picked committee. Nothing more has been heard of this maneuver, but it is expected to pop up again at the Monday conference.

Bittner and Fagin are tough fighters and veterans of many union wars. With any kind of a chance, they'll give Lewis plenty battle for his money.

Divided Counsel.

BUT the big question is what kind of a chance Murray and his backers will have.

To begin with, the policy committee is stacked overwhelmingly against them. Most of the members owe their good-paying jobs to Lewis and as he has long demonstrated, he is absolutely ruthless with those beholden to him who don't do his bidding.

Secondly, there is a division of views within the Murray camp on the course he should pursue.

Some are advising that he go before the committee with a blasting denunciation of Lewis and then resign. Others are urging that he denounce Lewis, but stick it out and defy him.

These advisers contend that for Murray to resign would be playing squarely into Lewis's hands; enable him to make the claim that Murray didn't dare face a showdown. On the other hand, by meeting Lewis head on, it is argued, Murray would force Lewis to carry the fight to the UMW rank and file, to whom the miner chief would have to justify his isolationism, his attacks on Roosevelt, and his recent attempts to raid other unions.

What Murray will do is his secret. But if Lewis starts anything, the fur will fly hot and furious.

Note: Government authorities view the disturbed internal UMW situation with concern. They fear that if the fight goes to the rank and file, which is tough, independent and battle-scarred, the battling may seriously retard coal production. Authorities are 100 per cent behind Murray and if he needs any help he'll get all he asks for—and then some.

Cave of Winds.

SOUTH CAROLINA'S crusty Senator "Cotton Ed" Smith has a little routine he invariably goes through when he enters the special elevator reserved for senators in the Capitol.

If he wants to go to the senate restaurant, he directs the elevator operator, "Let me off at the feed trough." If Smith is headed for the senate chamber he says, "Take me to the cave of the winds."

Note: Smith's pat description of the senate comes very fittingly from him. He is one of the most long-winded and bellow-voiced members of the chamber.

NYA-CCC Consolidation.

THE long considered consolidation of the National Youth administration and the CCC is about to take place.

Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt has approved the plan and an executive order has been prepared for the president's signature. Roosevelt has been in favor of the consolidation for a long time.

Likely head of the combined agency is Aubrey Williams, able and popular NYA director.

A veteran administrationite and one of the most efficient executives in Washington, Williams has powerful backing for the job on Capitol Hill from both Republicans and Democrats. One of the remarkable things about Williams is that although he is a staunch New Dealer, some of his strongest boosters are old-line Republicans.

Note: In the past 12 months, NYA has trained more than 400,000 skilled workers for war plants. Authorities rate NYA as the most effective industrial training agency in the government.

Linguists.

ONE thing that impressed Peruvian President Manuel Prado during his visit to the Capitol was the linguistic talent of the legislators.

Twenty-seven house members addressed the Peruvian chief in Spanish when they filed by to shake his hand. One member who proved himself especially adept was Representative Richard M. Kleberg of Texas.

Prado also showed himself an able linguist. In addition to speaking English fluently, he replied easily in French when Representative Aime J. Forand of Rhode Island addressed him in that tongue.

Later, the Peruvian grinningly told house leaders: "Had I known there were so many representatives who would have understood, I would have delivered my speech in Spanish."

War Flashes.

WHEN Nazi stooge Quisling recently issued a call for enlistments in a select "Quisling Guard" only 35 prospects in the whole of Norway responded... The labor shortage in Italy has become so acute that all males between 14 and 70 and all females between 16 and 60 have been required to register for "war work service."...

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK — Adolph Zukor's old hen house upon the Hudson has become a look-out post for Rockland County's airplane spotters.

This is a part of a once-fabulous estate that was some pumpkins in the old silent days when the movies were produced largely in the metropolitan area and California hadn't yet been invented. There were stables, swimming pools, manors, gate-houses, green velvet lawns, wooded acreage, lush landscaping, High Tor, and some fifty miles of the Hudson river to gaze upon.

Now the movies have fled to the coast and the Zukor estate isn't what it used to be, but the Hudson still rolls seaward, and the old hen house serves a nobler purpose even than in the days when the prize Rhode Island Reds cackled there.

Rockland County is proud of its defense efforts and the county's gentry regularly take turns during the dark watch to look for planes and report their presence to Army interceptor points throughout the eastern seaboard.

YOU have but to gaze at entries in the log book to see who has stood guard and reported the events of the watch. Maxwell Anderson, the playwright, did not neglect posterity when his relief was late the other morning.

At dawn, after four hours on the look-out, he opened the log-book and wrote, "It is six oclock. My relief is already a half hour late. Am I going to have to stay here INDEFINITELY?"

A swift glance through the book reveals that some kindly matron in the district arrived with sandwiches, doughnuts, milk and coffee for the watchers.

Another shows what effect a recent headline had on one watcher. "Saw mosquito; sank same," was the terse report. The watcher then pasted the dead mosquito into the book, as added evidence.

THE Federal Building, at 90 Church street, gives added evidence of the way war closes in on the citizens. This is a post office, a U. S. Army medical dispensary, and a recruiting station for the Army and the Navy.

When you arrive there you see soldiers and sailors on the sidewalk, heavily armed. They ask you what you want. If you have any reason for entering the building you are passed through the door. An officer at once ascertains your business and directs you to a long table at the right of the foyer, where your business is again "ascertained" and a button bearing a number pinned on your lapel. If you lose this number, you better start wiring your congressman or make an effort to get to FDR direct, for you are in trouble. You can't get out without it.

Another officer asks what floor you want, and looks at your credentials. He then passes you to the elevators, which are manned by cops. On each floor are armed "receptionists." When you achieve your mission, you return to the ground floor, where an officer grabs you and directs you through a side door. As you go out you return your badge to a cop. This goes for men in uniform as well as civilians. Nobody trusts nutin'.

"With Furrow Straight."

My father took my hand in his;
I am his only son.
"Go into battle brave," he said
"As men have ever done

"In our line. I will plow and sow
And tend your chores and do
Your stint here on the farm until
The war's dark work is through.

"Fight as you plowed with furrow straight,
With all your will and might;
Show them a farmer's boy can hold
His end up in the fight."

House-Cleaning Time

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

THOSE of you who follow this column from year to year, know that housecleaning time is always a strain on my placid soul. Paint! The smell of it makes me sick, ever since I walked beneath a painter's ladder once, and had green paint spilled over me. I do not like to handle wall paper, either, for the stuff winds all around and when I pull, it tears. I would willingly starve at the paperhangers' trade.

Whoever built the house we are living in was a real economist. He wasted no space in closets or cupboards—he did not even put doors between the rooms—and he made the floor strong and tight enough to catch everything. All open and above board, so to speak.

Every member of our family can find his things, because all he needs to do is look where it couldn't possibly be—and there it is. Unless, of course, Dad hid it somewhere, himself, and then nobody can find it.

When my wife starts slinging paint around, papering the rooms and changing all the furniture, I usually get busy in the orchard, the garden or the hill. I love my home, and I know my limitations. (She knows them too, and is willing for me to go.)

This year it is casein and resin wall paint that goes right on over the old wall paper, in both bedrooms. This year the old radio, upsidedown, is converted into a book cupboard. This year, in addition to repairing screens, my own task will be to wire the house for electric current—for last week the linemen came with rolls of new coppery wire, requisitioned to finish the job of rural electrification so well started last summer.

To be sure, the typewriter took a fall and lost three keys. This week's columns went to the printer looking like lisping Susans. To be sure the littlest boy sat down in white paint and bears upon the back of his Sunday suit a mark like a cottontail. But nothing really matters so long as the windows are clean, the curtains are back in place, crisp and starched and beruffled, the furniture is varnished and the floors are waxed.

Housecleaning time has come and gone again—now I can relax and really enjoy myself for another year.

Message To Serve As 'Souvenir For Someday'

SOMETHING of the inspiration that, back in 1898, drove the late Elbert Hubbard to pen his famous "Message to Garcia," seems to have impelled a former Mansfield resident to write a 1,000-word "message" that may come near rivalling the Hubbard production in popular appeal—if means are found for widespread distribution.

This "message," entitled "A Souvenir for Someday," is directed to "Messrs. Hitler, Hiirohito & Co.,—In Reply To Yours of December 7th," and was written by George Park, now located at Bridgeport, Conn., in the advertising department of the General Electric company.

Written under date of April 30, 1942, the "message" is made to coincide with ceremonies incident to the wind-up of electric refrigerator production, in readiness for all-out production of war materials.

Following the introductory paragraphs which establish the theme, "But then, you wouldn't know about this," the message continues:

"Now, you might think that this, then, was a sad day . . . if something like a refrigerator meant so much to us. You, Adolf, would say it was typical of a decadent democracy. But, be not deceived! There is no sadness! Rather a fierce, a burning joy. An off-with-the-coats, a spit-on-the-hands type of exaltation! You see, something like an electric refrigerator is more to us than a motor and a cabinet and some shelves. It's like ball games; and church on Sunday; and election parades and senior proms; and automobiles and hot dogs. But then you wouldn't know about things like that.

"Democratic? Lord, yes! A refrigerator is democratic. It's one of those things that stands so strongly for the American Way of Life.

That's why our spines tingled a little when we saw the last one move down the line today. That's why our blood raced and a song of fury burned in our hearts. It wasn't a burial, Adolf and Hirohito; no, it was a Birth! The birth of a great New Warrior who will join with other Great Strong Warriors reborn since December 7th. And these Great Strong Warriors are on the march already. Soon they will come crashing over your borders with endless streams of tanks and guns and shells. Soon your skies will be darkened with great clouds of planes . . .

"You thought Our President was kidding, didn't you, when he mentioned our production program; when he gave you all those enormous figures for guns and tanks and ships and planes. He wasn't kidding, Adolf and Hirohito. They're on the way NOW. And coming so fast the quotas will be doubled, if need be. . .

"How is it possible? Well, FREE MEN are making them . . . Men who WANT to make guns and planes and tanks and ships, Millions of FREE MEN working without bayonets at their backs. Working longer hours, getting along with less comforts and not complaining. Needing no Gestapo, no concentration camps to keep them in line. FREE MEN, singing a free song, working for freedom, WANTING to make sacrifices. FREE MEN who know freedom is not a gift . . . it's a VICTORY! A Spiritual Achievement! But then you wouldn't know about things like that."

These excerpts serve to give an idea of the tenor of the "message" which, while it may never reach the eyes of those to whom it is directed, sounds a note of confidence and prophecy that will encourage and inspire all Americans who read it.

Staman of Mifflin was foreman of the jury.

Damages of $5,000 for assault are asked in a suit filed in common pleas court by Jennie Belle Miller against Paul A. Funk. The plaintiff alleges that on Feb. 28, 1942, the defendant broke into her home and assaulted her while she had a child in her arms, that he threw her into a bedroom and attempted to lock her in the room.

Common Pleas Judge H. E. Culbertson has ruled in favor of the plaintiff in the suit of Anna E. Lash, administratriv of the estate of Joseph H. Lash and others, against Olive A. Seymour Mann and others. The ruling cancels and discharges a judgment of $1,660 rendered May 12, 1931, which was a deficiency judgment found due Olive A. Seymour Mann on 135 acres in Jackson township formerly owned by Joseph and Anna Lash and which was sold by foreclosure of mortgage of the Aetna Life Insurance company. As there was not enough money left from the sale of the property to satisfy this, judgment, five executions had been issued and levies made on the Lash's interest in 80 acres in Orange township.

A decree of divorce was granted Monday in common pleas court in the suit of Geraldine Schneider against Fred S. Schneider on grounds of wilful absence for more than three years.

In the divorce suit of Ada Lavon Stuhldreher against Chris Henry Stuhldreher the defendant has been ordered to pay $7 per week support during pendency of the suit.

Mayor S. F. Trimble presided and during the meeting asked why the voluntary fire alarm system which had been reconditioned for use some time ago was not put in operation.

Council decided that with the auxiliary police and civilian defense workers the congestion should be easily handled, and C. A. Thomas then showed how the alarm worked and the system was tried out.

Home-Made Uniforms Are Smart

By SUSAN BARDEN
International Illustrated News Writer

Women all over the country have discovered that they can do their patriotic duty, in uniform or work clothes, and still keep the budget intact if they will make their own.

Relief garments and defense uniforms, for example, are stitched up thriftily and quickly with modern sewing machine equipment at Red Cross headquarters, in local sewing centers, at home and wherever else groups of women gather

The United States Department of Agriculture's Home Economics bureau has designed some uniforms that are primarily functional, but also smart and becoming. But most important is that they will be according to regulations, easy to wear and easy to work in

The three photographs above show the correct outfits for three different kinds of war work.

For Farm or Factory.

The all-in-one defense uniform that's especially suited for farm or factory work has a slide fastener closing at the ankle for comfort and protection It has buttoned-down patch pockets and a trim collar and short sleeves. A Dutch cap with a long pointed visor, made of the same material as the cover-all, is a becoming protection from dust and dirt.

Another practical work uniform which has the approval of the Department of Agriculture is a one-piece overall made of plain denim that's teamed with a striped denim tuck-in shirtwaist The simple front-button closing makes the overall easy to put on and take off.

If you have enlisted in the American Red Cross Volunteer Special Service corps, make your uniform of sturdy, thrifty poplin. The one above is a regular costume. The pattern calls for a front-button closing from neckline to hem The sleeves are long and there is a patch pocket on one side of the skirt. A veil-trimmed cap completes the outfit.

Even if you are a beginner at sewing you can turn out any one of these uniforms in a professional manner by spending a few hours at your local sewing center, where free instruction is offered in making defense uniforms and work clothes for which patterns are available.

Manicures Can Be Given In Ten Minutes

By MME. QUI VIVE

Time is chasing after the heels of all of us. Lazy girls have been dragged from their soft cushions, put to work. Busy girls have added new duties to the regular ones. The session at the beauty shop is a special treat, not the weekly fiesta as of yore. Hence the need of a little homework now and then.

Many once lily-white hands are lily-white no longer. They are coming in contact with the dish pan, the carpet sweeper and the dust cloth for the first time. Or they are doing work in factories. They need better care than ever before because dust and grime take a toll from the cutaneous surfaces. And they aren't getting it. When peace comes, we don't want to be horny-handed. Buck up, girls, see what you can do to keep your finger nails in form.

Here is an emergency cleanup method. It will come in handy when you get a last minute date to fare forth with your best fellow.

Don't wash the hands first. If you do the nails will bend during the shaping process. With a long, sharp, flexible file cut the eaves to a neat oval, working from sides to centers, being careful not to burrow down too far at the sides, a practice that will cause the flesh to thicken.

Pass the orangewood stick under the nails. Some tiny shags, never removed by the first filing, will come to light. Whisk them away with a beveling file or emery board. Now you are ready for a soapy scrubbing. Use a nail brush briskly.

Dip the orangewood stick in nail white, sweep under the eaves, forming a clear cut outline. You can use a nail white pencil, if you prefer. They are convenient, except that they have to be kept sharpened.

So far, so good. To each nail apply some olive oil, or rub on a cuticle cream. Do little circles with the stick to loosen the flesh from the nail fabric. Be gentle, especially at the base where it is possible to injure the underlying matrix. Injury to the matrix may result on a grooved or deformed talon.

During this part of the treatment you may dig up a hangnail or two. Remove with the curved, needle-point scissors, directing the points toward the nail eave. Remember that the slightest wound is subject to infection, so be careful.

Now for another hand washing, rinsing and drying. No oil or cream must remain. You can put oil on polish, but not polish on oil. Not if you want your shell pink veneer to stick by you.

Apply a light film of polish, let it dry, make a second application. Whether or not you color the eaves is your own business. Some do, some don't.

MODERN TREND

The modern trend in coiffures emphasizes lustre and highlights. Hair experts tell us we all have potentially beautiful hair with hidden colors and tints that should sparkle by day and gleam by night. They say that only brushing and frequent shampooing with liquid soapless shampoo will bring them out.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

I STIFFENED warily at the "trade" the bound gangster had just offered me, but felt suddenly that my veins were filled with water, as I realized the significance of his reference to my father.

It was not lost either, upon the three men on guard—Bill, one of my father's men whom I had detailed to drive the big armored car of the gangsters; Jim Watson, the native New Englander who had assisted us so signally, and the state trooper whom his captain had assigned to help guard the gangsters and, when unobserved, to take down their talk with each other in shorthand.

Bill's head swiveled around from his driver's seat as he glared at the gangster who had spoken to me.

"Pipe down, you!" he said, and at the same moment Jim Watson demanded truculently: "Do you want your map smeared over your vest?" The state trooper said quietly: "Not another word from you, unless—" he flickered an eyebrow in my direction—"unless Mrs. Graham wants to listen to you."

Will Listen to Gangster.

I wanted to say: "Oh, no! Don't let him speak again! But I knew that I mut find out what the man had meant, so I said; "I will hear what he has to say, but he must make it brief."

"It will take only a minute," the man said eagerly. "All I want is for you to call a number for me, and when somebody—anybody—answers the phone, say 'Al said to tell Pete he's delayed by important business, and can't fill that order for overcoats on time. Tell him he'd better get them somewhere else'."

He licked his lips furtively and hurried on.

"It's important for him to get that message," he went on. "He's depending on me to fill his order, and I'm going to lose an awful lot of money by failing him, but it won't be so bad if he knows of it in time to get his order filled somewhere else. Will you send the message?"

Gives a False Promise.

I pretended to deliberate.

"You said you had something to tell me about my father," I said at last.

"That was a trade," he said quickly. "I have to take your word that you'll telephone. If you give me that, I'll spill what I know about your father."

I had no compunction in giving him a promise I did not intend to keep.

"Very well," I said. "I will send the message. What is the name and number."

"You don't need any name," he said, "and it's better all around that you don't know it. But here's the number. Got a pencil?"

I produced one and poised it above my tiny note pad. But I almost dropped the pad when he gave me the number, for it was the unlisted number at the Hotel Lansfield which Sadie, the long distance operator, had given me at the behest of the captain of the state troopers—the number from which a message had come to the man in front of me only a little while before my arrival at the cottage.

Luckily I had my eyes fixed on the pad so that he could not see my surprise, and I was able to keep my facial muscles and fingers composed so that he apparently noticed nothing of my perturbation.

Plan to Kill Madge's Father.

But his mention of that number had confirmed a resolution I had made when I first learned of it from Sadie—that I would not telephone my father again at the Lansfield until we had been able to dispose effectively of that "listening post" at the hotel.

I raised my eyes from the pad and looked at the man whose ophidian eyes were watching me in the same fashion which chilled me so when I still thought he was Professor Diswell, only now so queerly changed.

"I have the number now," I said. "and I am waiting to hear what you have to tell me about my father."

"You give your word you'll send that message for me?" he insisted.

"Yes, yes," I told him. "You have my word." I had to steel myself with the remembrance of what was at stake, as I perjured myself.

"Then here's the dope," he said. "Better look out for your old man tonight, for there's a certain gang planning to rub him out the minute he goes outside the hotel. Tell him he'd better stay safe in his rooms."

LIQUID SHAMPOO

No need to raid the larder any more for vinegar and eggs to cut the soap film or add lustre to your locks when you give yourself a shampoo at home. Science has evolved a new liquid shampoo which having no soap ingredient leaves none in the hair and, further, imparts 33 per cent more lustre to all types of tresses than any other preparation.

There Are Evils In Showing Off Children

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

A LITTLE while ago I observed a program given by the young children of a Sunday school before the whole school filling a large auditorium. It was dignified, impressive, brief.

No little tots were sent out on the platform alone to be embarrassed and forget their pieces, or to be laughed at for their cunningness. They appeared in groups talking together, singing in concert, doing team work.

I have come away from similar exercises enraged at what I saw and heard. Babies scarcely able to toddle lisping little songs or verses, roared at by the audience if they did anything not expected of adults, laughed at in the midst of their performance; little children saying things which they thought were sacred but which, they discovered, big people of the church treated as mere jokes.

Those who with great diligence and patience train the little children for such a program don't have the children in mind. An entertainment is being put on for the grown-ups.

The little child who spouts off pieces in public or at home before guests, so as to win strong approval, is in grave danger of becoming priggish. He soon craves for more attention that he ought to have, and for more than he will get later in life. When, at last, he feels a falling off of marvel and surprise at his cleverness, he suffers terribly. He may become annoying to adults, avoided by his playmates.

If you have a child who is musically inclined, it may encourage him to practice if you have him play occasionally before your friends. But keep in mind that grave dangers face him and that, therefore, you are going to do your utmost not to ruin him.

As a rule, it is not good for young children to perform individually in public, nor at home before company.

Solving Parent Problems.

Q. I have a child eight years old whom I have tried to bring up without resorting to physical punishment but solely by reasoning and persuading. Now I find him almost unmanageable. Should I use corporal punishment on him?

A. I dislike to advise corporal punishment so very late. Of course, you must find some way to manage that lad. In case you do use corporal punishment, you and the boy's other parent should first agree on a definite program. In this event, let me suggest that you limit such punishment to only one situation (when he leaves the chair to which he has been assigned to sit doing nothing for, say thirty minutes) before the assigned time is up.

Q. Should a child under eight or 10 eat with dinner guests in the home?

A. Depending on the child and the guests. If the child has good eating habits and is easily managed and if the guests understand, appreciate and enjoy children and know how to treat them wisely, all should profit from the presence of the child; especially the child.

Don't Talk About Your Many Troubles

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Scene: A restaurant, a glorified beanery where hearteners are to be had if one has the price, and dinners—"the price of the entree includes beverage and dessert"—run from sixty-five cents to $1.35. Tables full, waiting line. Some enlisted men present but larger number of first and second lieutenants with girl friends, some of whom look like girls to whom they've had letters of introduction. Others resemble temporary dates.

Perhaps never is there a time in the course of human events when people want to be cheered, amused and set free from troubles than when a man is in uniform and may be sent into a danger zone any day.

Yesterday I lunched in one of the restaurants described above and was impressed by a very pretty girl who, through some machiniations of the fates had succeeded in rounding up a most attractive second lieutenant, as the insignia on his uniform indicated.

The young man was out for a pleasant afternoon. He ordered the best that the super-beanery provided. There was some talk about going to a movie after lunch and some further festivity at the home of a brother officer, which would include supper. The day was lovely and sunshiny. The young man seemed intrigued with his partner. From phrases dropped here and there, I concluded the girl was no pick-up, but that she was someone he had met through a letter of introduction or through regular social channels.

The meal had hardly begun before "sister" turned the tables for two into a wailing wall. Apparently she has been waiting for someone on whom to unload her peeves. It was like the bursting of a dam in a spring flood. Nothing could hold her back.

It seems that she was employed in one of the uppity-uppity shops—or perhaps it goes by the name of a 'salon'—which caters to the most expensive clientele. The girl said, as a designer, she traveled to get the most and best fashions, something that would make an old dowager with a double mezzanine figure look positively streamlined. Her troubles were with the manager, who said the dress designs weren't slinky enough, and the models, who didn't preen properly as they pirouetted past the high-priced trade.

But it wasn't her fault, oh dear no. When one couldn't go to Paris to get models, what could be expected? You really didn't get anything worthwhile in Palm Beach, and she didn't feel safe in going to Havana. And now with all this talk of the government freezing styles, what could a poor girl do?

At first the young man seemed faintly amused with this conversation fol de rol. But he speedily took refuge in his broiled steak and ordered a second cocktail to brace him from the wailings.

"And I said to him—the manager I mean," and she pushed aside her fried chicken, "it's not up to me that she turned down that dress after she ordered it. It was the way the model slumped across the room, didn't hold her stomach in or her chin up."

"Why do they all pick on you?" asked the second lieutenant wearily.

"It's because I'm not a bit sporty I guess. I don't go out on the wild parties with the manager or the models."

The lieutenant stifled a yawn and looked as if a dash of gayety mightn't hurt her.

Then she launched into her mother's neuralgia. The lieutenant yawned openly. "Well, I think I'll go home and take a nap," he said. "I don't feel much like walking." He picked up the two checks, helped her into her coat, made a profound bow outside the beanery, and said: "If you'll excuse me—"

"The Authority on Authorities"

LOW FINESSE IS PRETTY

Finessing of a small card on an early round always looks spectacular. Many such plays by fine cardsmen look fancy to kibitzers of average grade, but some of them are utterly obligatory. There are occasional contracts which cannot be made by any other method, so that the effort must be made.

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

1 ♠	Pass	3 ♣	Pass
3 ♥	Pass	4 ♣	Pass

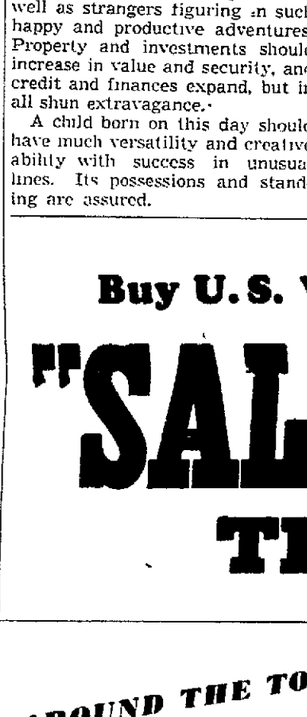
After West led his diamond J, there was plenty of work to be done by the astute declarer, who was Walter Beinecke, chairman of New York's Inter-Club Contract league. He could count only three certain tricks in spades, four in hearts, and two in diamonds, which left him with three club tricks needed if the spades did not divide evenly. To get those seemed out of the question unless West held the heart J. That finesse had to be tried on the first round or not at all, as he had only a singleton to lead.

So he won the diamond J with the K, in order to leave the A in dummy as a re-entry, then immediately led the club 5. When West played the 8, he called the 9 from dummy, and it held. The club K was sent to the A, and the diamond 9 came back to the A. Three more clubs were cashed, plus three high hearts to make the contract.

Tomorrow's Problem.



(Dealer: East. East-West vulnerable.)

What constitutes the smartest play by both sides on this deal, if East plays it at 4-Hearts?

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Wednesday, May 20.

A generally propitious and pleasant state of affairs is found in this day's astrological chart, this happy condition pervading and prospering all the affairs. An element of surprise or the unforeseen may be found in gains and benefits which may come from many directions and interests. This may mean promotion, advancement, tokens of preferment and esteem from superiors, relatives or those in influential places. Property and possessions should increase and investments prosper.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of advancement, growth, promotion and a generally profitable and pleasant state of affairs. Benefits and gratifying situations may arise from unexpected and surprising sources, with elders, relatives, superiors as well as strangers figuring in such happy and productive adventures. Property and investments should increase in value and security, and credit and finances expand, but in all shun extravagance.

A child born on this day should have much versatility and creative ability with success in unusual lines. Its possessions and standing are assured.

WAR-CONSCIOUS AKRON PLUNGES INTO WAR WORK

'Tire Capital' Turns Out Weapons and Parts For U. S. War Machine.

(Editor's note: The Associated Press made a cross-section survey to discover how the average Ohioan has been affected, what he is doing in the war effort. This is the second of a series of articles in the survey.)

By CHARLES C. MILLER
(Written for Associated Press)

AKRON, O.—If by any stretch of the imagination Akron is still a ghost town—as it was widely advertised in 1937—it has 60,000 wraiths on a round-the-clock production basis batting out weapons of war that are anything but ghostlike.

Akron has 60,000 workers directly in war industry — 75 per cent of its total number of employed. On direct and sub-contract work, they are producing in excess of a thousand completed weapons and parts for the war machine — ranging from fighter planes, patrol airships and barrage balloons to guns and everyone of the conceivable applications of rubber to mechanized fighting forces.

Factories are beating out a song of overtime and the refrain is "big money." It would have been silk shirt money in the last war when rubber workers wore them into the gum mines. But a high percentage of factory participation in bond buying on a payroll deduction basis is siphoning a lot of the surplus that went for frills in the rubber capital's last boom.

Probably more "tire conscious" than outlanders who haven't felt the rubber pinch in terms of lost jobs that forced them into war production, workers and the civilian population at large have taken their belts up a hitch without a squawk. Hundreds of workers are sharing their cars on four and five-man rotation plans, taking turns running an informal pickup service to save rubber.

This has been mirrored in the surprising absence of complaints about restrictions placed on civilian population, and in an outstanding response on the part of 22,000 volunteers to appeal for enrollment in the various branches of civilian defense.

More than half of these have completed prescribed courses of training as auxiliary fire and policemen, air raid wardens, fire watchers, messengers, and field medical staffs. All of them have completed at least a part of the course. First city in the state to organize a civilian defense council, Akron had the rudiments of its present organization functioning more than a year ago, and is now regarded as ahead of any other major city in the midwest.

One situation is critical—housing. With a heavy influx of skilled workers from outside bidding against each other for quarters, habitable dwellings for rent dropped to one half of one per cent in recent months and rents rose steadily over the period of a year until pegged by the OPA freezing order.

Conditions were not appreciably eased in 1941 by the construction of more than 3,000 dwelling units by public and private capital, as workers attracted by defense production came in faster than quarters could be completed — even with defense housing officials commandeering two slum clearance projects containing more than 500 dwelling units as they were completed.

Labor supply committee officials anticipate demands for at least 20,000, perhaps a great deal many more, workers at Goodyear Aircraft Corp. this year as production on fighter planes for one company and one fighter plane parts for five other companies hits a peak at the big East Akron airplane factories now built and building. With half the war workers on night shifts and many soldiers quartered here for technical training, the problem of recreation has been solved by putting dancing, bowling, publicly sponsored parties, and some movies on an "owl shift" basis.

With prices pegged, wages high, and demands for labor outrunning supply in many cases, the outlook of the wage earner including thousands of women who have gone into the factories is bright and steady.

The plight of the farmer is another story. Agriculture does not bulk large in industrially-crowded Summit county. But for the men who grow a $3,000,000 food basket here annually, there are long hours, hard work ahead.

True, prices are good, particularly on milk which accounts for half the value of the farm products, and on a half million dollars worth of truck raised in the Copley swamps circling a part of the city. But with virtually all farm labor lost to —the army or 2— to industry, proprietors are hard put in getting their normal acreage, much less increasing their output to any great extent.

Thirty thousand planned victory gardens scheduled under the program of the Summit county civilian defense council will ease the load to some extent. But the problems of harvest ahead carry no easy solution.

CUT STOVEWOOD

HOLLIS, N. H.—(CP)—Parishioners of the Congregational church are certain to be warm at services through 1944. More than a score of them spent a week cutting and trucking about five cords of wood which workers estimated would last through two more winters.

There are more than 2,500,000 bicycles in use in Sweden, or five for every 12 inhabitants.

'Atagirls' Fly Warplanes From Factories to Airfields

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Meet the "Atagirls," members of the womens section of the Air Transport Auxiliary.

Their job is to ferry planes from factory to aerodrome.

Among the forty odd women members are mothers and wives.

They start their tough day about 7 a. m. in their billets where they set out to their secret headquarters. Here, a large transport plane awaits them. It is popularly known as the "flying bus."

When all have arrived, they crowd into the "flying bus" and sit on the floor while another Atagirl pilots them to various factories where they are detailed to take newly tested planes to aerodromes.

The "flying bus" is not very comfortable, it is not meant to be. It is war-time.

While they are in the transport, they receive their orders for the day from their leader, Captain Pauline Gower, famous woman flier.

At the factories the factory superintendent takes one or two Atagirls from the "flying bus" to planes waiting to be flown to aerodromes.

One or two girls are dropped at each factory.

Sometimes the Atagirl is faced with a plane of which she has had no previous experience. But her job is to get into the plane and take it intact to an awaiting drome.

Once the plane is taken to the 'drome the Atagirl waits for the "flying bus" to come for her and take her back to headquarters or to another factory.

Sometimes, through bad weather, the old transport doesn't arrive. When in this position, the Atagirl has to find her own way home.

More than once Atagirls have "thumbed" their way home scores of miles, complete with parachute, after a hard day's work.

Up to now, the Atagirls have only piloted heavy and light trainers.

In the near future, they will be handling the complicated controls of British bombers. This is a responsibility which the Atagirls have been hoping for since they were first formed at the beginning of the war.

They also cherish the ambition of ferrying bombers across the Atlantic.

Although they are fighting for this privilege, it is not likely to be granted . . . yet.

The Atagirls have to fly in all kinds of weather without any help from radio or the ground. They do all their flying by map.

No woman is accepted for the Atagirls unless she has had at least 150 flying hours to her credit. Some of them have flown for well over 1,000 flying hours.

JOINS NAVY, NOT ARRESTED

PORTLAND, Ore. —(CP)— One Portlander is convinced that he "profited" by joining the navy. Two policemen came to the home of Leonard Erdman with a warrant for his arrest on a traffic charge. They tore it up when Erdman informed them that he had over-parked while enlisting.

RELIEF COSTS IN COUNTY DROP FOR 3RD MONTH

April Expenditures Decline $353 as Compared to March, Director Reports.

For the third successive month, relief expenditures for Mansfield and Richland county showed a sizeable decline, according to the April report issued today by J. V. Finney, county relief director.

Relief costs in April were $7,144 or $353 less than in March. During March and February, decreases of $886 and $362 respectively were recorded.

Mansfield spent $2,481 plus $588 for medical services for indigents during April while Richland county paid out $1,835 plus $971 for medical services.

In both areas, the case load was decreased 40 cases, leaving a total of 245 cases which represent 716 persons who are receiving direct or work relief in the two areas combined.

The county has 112 of the cases while the city has 133 cases at present. The county added 10 cases during April and closed 20. The city added 17 and closed 47 cases.

Partly responsible for the decline was the withdrawal of several WPA projects from the county because of the diversion of federal funds for the war effort.

During April, 14 persons were certified for WPA work, 36 were assigned to projects and 14 removed because of private employment or illness. Two hundred persons are now employed on WPA projects throughout the county and 30 are awaiting assignment.

Eighty-eight families including 259 persons were cared for by 54 workers on the WPA housekeeping aid project who spent 3,836 hours in the homes of indigent persons.

FOUR TEACHERS RESIGN POSTS

Music Instructor, Commercial Teacher and 2 in Grades Leave System.

Resignations of four Mansfield teachers, including S. K. Jorgensen, instructor of instrumental music for the past four years, were accepted last night by the board of education.

Resigning with Jorgensen were his wife, the former Miss Beatrice McLees, commericial teacher at Senior high school; Miss Betty Lake, teacher at Prospect school, and Miss Mary Henry who has taught at Woodland school.

In submitting his resignation to the board, Jorgensen said he planned to teach music in a college which was not named. The Jorgensen's' resignation are effective at the end of the persent school year. They were married about a week ago.

Supt. W. L. Miller said teachers to fill the four vacancies would probably be employed at a special meeting of the board of education within the next two weeks. It will not be necessary to re-employ most of the teachers in the city schools since they have continuing contracts and need only to be informed of their salary figures for next year, the superintendent pointed out.

The board last night employed two women to replace men assistant janitors in the school system. They were Mrs. Violet Zehner and Mrs. Estella Schonauer who will receive 50 cents an hour. They will take the jobs formally held by Harold D. Welsh and Keith Ross who resigned.

J. B. Moke, superintendent of buildings, said men janitors are becoming increasingly difficult to find. He said the women will do cleaning work.

The board approved the appointment of Miss Clara Patton as a teacher in the Western avenue school to substitute for Miss Rebecca Grubaugh who is ill. Miss Patton, regularly a teacher in the Hedges school, has been on a leave-of-absence.

Forming of War Food Board Predicted

THE WAR TODAY

(This daily feature, conducted by DeWitt Mackenzie, Wide World war analyst, is being written during his absence for a fortnight by Fred Vanderschmidt.)

* * *

Just about two years ago, in concluding his tragic official dispatches dealing with the lost campaign in Flanders, General Lord Gort, commander in chief of the British expeditionary force, wrote of "the vital necessity for an expeditionary force, if it is to be used in a first class war, being equipped on a scale commensurate with the task it is to be called upon to fulfill."

Today's news from Ulster makes it evident that this primary lesson in the long, galling "too little-too late series" has been learned.

The greatest A.E.F. of this war has reached United Kingdom stations, tens of thousands of husky young men, and they are superbly equipped with tanks, big guns and transport.

There is, of course, no doubt that this American force is destined to fight alongside the pick of Britain's armies somewhere in France, or Belgium, or The Netherlands or Norway.

It has been argued that creation of some kind of an Allied second front in western Europe, even though the effort were purely sacrificial, would provide the greatest sort of aid possible to the Russians.

It now is clear, however, that the Allies—Russia included—have become convinced that of first importance is the unflagging delivery of weapons to the Red armies while they still are able to maintain the initiative in their life-and-death battle; this, plus constant and terrible air action against the Nazis' own sources of supply.

These deliveries, largely by the Arctic route around the long and menacing coasts of Nazi-occupied Norway, constitute a problem of the first magnitude in sea-borne transport and convoy.

Premature creation of a real second front in the west, involving the holding by sea-power of strong bridge-heads at points between North Cape and Brest, immediately would strip the Arctic supply route of the men o'war and merchant ships now plying this dangerous route.

Almost certainly, in the present position of Allied navies and shipping, this would bring to an indefinite halt the Allied deliveries to Murmansk and Archangel, at a time when those deliveries may tip the balance in the battle of Russia, and spell ultimate military disaster for Hitler's vast armies of the east.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Speaking For Myself.

I SEE that another pendulum has swung in cinemaland, this time in the dialogue division, and I am immensely diverted to find that it even has whacked that superb director, Mr. Alfred Hitchcock.

Kilgallen

The swing I refer to is the triumph of the soignee criminal over the nasty, rough, ungentlemanly kind, particularly in the matter of speech.

When the pendulum was at the other side of the arc, not so long ago, bad men had no grammar. Their celluloid sentences were in the "Keep ya trap shut ya bum or I'll blow ya head off" groove; they were not kind to their mothers; they shaved less than was necessary, and probably ate garlic.

Now things are different. I have noticed the change in several recent flickers, but a very fine example is Mr. Hitchcock's excellent "Saboteur." In an effort, I suppose, to show that saboteurs are really quite ordinary persons except for their passion for demolition, Mr. Hitchcock makes one Fifth columnist a devoted granddaddy; another the fond and sentimental father of two children, and the others assorted gourmets, art fanciers and music lovers. One character, on his way to blow up a battleship, remarked, if I recall correctly: "I hope we get this job over quickly—I promised to take my sister to the Philharmonic."

The inference is that aside from their hobby of destroying the U. S. A. the current bad men make quite a charming, cultured little group who are loath to dynamite a hotel in which the food is poetic, and prefer to hide out from the F. B. I. in places close to the art galleries.

I think they have been feeding the script writers crepes suzettes, instead of red meat.

I shouldn't be surprised if New Yorkers become a population of roof-dwellers this summer, with gas being doled out in perfume vials and rail travel discouraged. A lot of Manhattan folk will be taking their vacations close to home, and a well-outfitted roof will become essential equipment to every apartment house — proper accoutrements being deck chairs, awnings, deck games, a refreshment bar, possibly even a hostess to introduce the apartment dwellers to one another. Because, make no mistake about it, this coming trend is going to mean that New Yorkers will get to know their next door neighbors—an innovation as startling for this town as anything since the first subway.

I notice that Marlene Dietrich, whose hair used to be red-gold, is now a near-platinum blond — about the Connie Bennett shade . . . No night club act in town tickles me quite as much as little Tommy Dix and little Teri Keane doing a road-company Jeannette MacDonald-Nelson Eddy duet on the floor of the Capacabana. I'm hysterical! . . . Wonder what it is about the sea that chases sailors into a park as soon as they hit land? Central Park, viewed from nearby skyscrapers, looks like a restless blueberry patch—these afternoons when the gobs turn out full force . . . I'd like to know the identity of the gray-haired, be-goggled septugenarian who attends several shows a day, every day, at the Music Hall. He bawls out anyone around him who whispers during the overture or ballet—but goes into a snit when the audience applauds the Rockettes!

When I wrote the other day that I wondered if anyone had a sedan chair in his garage, I received a prompt note on green stationery from my friend Bob ("Believe It or Not") Ripley, who replied that he not only has a sedan chair in his garage but in his apartment as well, and invited me up to have a cocktail in it, or on it, or in the vicinity thereof. Unfortunately that was the afternoon when I had to go for my sugar rationing book, so I was unable to attend, but I am happy to know that Bob is prepared for the gasoline shortage, and I am certainly proud that I know someone with two sedan chairs, both in good working order.

Kay Kyser's popularity is an amazing phenomenon. He broke all records up at Meadow Brook—the test tube for dance bands—but that's nothing. The astonishing thing was the kind of audience he drew. Not just kids—but middle-aged people and even grandmothers and grandfathers. And nobody danced, not even the jitterbugs; they just stood on the dance floor, as close to the bandstand as they could get, and listened and looked . . . Grace Moore says she giggled when she read here that girls with upswept hair looked surprised—because that's how she's wearing her hair these days. But she says she thinks she always looks surprised, whether her hair is up or down.

ARMY BOMBERS WIN VICTORY OVER VOLCANO

Divert Stream of Lava From Hawaiian City in 'Bombing Attack.'

(By International News Service)

HONOLULU, T. H. — Several U. S. army air corps bomber crews in Hawaii were ready today to resume their war against Japan, after taking time out to battle the territory's largest volcano during a spectacular 22-day eruption period which was kept a military secret until late yesterday.

Observers credited the bombers with helping to divert a stream of red-hot lava from ancient Mauna Loa which menaced the city of Hilo, principal port on the island of Hawaii.

Military authorities refused to allow any news dispatches on the activity of Mauna Loa because the fountains of lava which spurted upward from rifts in the 13,675-foot mountain completely nullified the blackout of the Hawaiian islands and provided a beacon which would have been spotted by the enemy from a radius of several hundred miles.

It was when the spurts of lava died down and the molten substance began to surge down the mountainside toward Hilo that the army bombers were called into action, marking the second time in seven years they had been used for this purpose.

The bombers blasted away at the so-called "cooling edges," thus helping the lava to run off harmlessly into a desert area, rather than into the port city of 20,000.

Mauna Loa burst forth in her blazing glory for the first time on the night of Sunday, April 26, and the streams of lava provided a light so powerful that residents of Hilo, more than 30 miles away, were able to read newspapers in the streets.

There were two other major eruptions on Monday night, April 27, and Thursday, May 7.

The opening session subsided suddenly early on the morning of April 27, but the second one started off that same night, and it was from this flow of lava that the menace to Hilo developed.

Despite the censorship, word of the eruption soon spread throughout the islands, but the usual sightseeing tours, bringing visitors by plane and ship from Honolulu and other parts of the islands, were missing this time because of the war.

Mrs. LaDow's Will Sets Up Bequest of $87,000.

Mrs. Jesse E. LaDow, who died May 12, left all of an estate estimated at $87,000 to a daughter, Mrs. Harrison Lowrey of Mansfield, according to her will which had been filed today in common pleas court.

Mrs. LaDow stated in her will that she made no provision for her husband because he was "amply provided for by his own efforts."

She asked that Deming LaDow Lowrey and Harrison G. Lowrey be appointed executors of the estate. All but $3.000 of the estate is in personal property, including stocks and bonds, according to the application for administration.

SEE BIG BOOST IN WAR OUTPUT

Legislators Declare Taper Off Plan on New Plants Will Speed Weapons.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—A 25 per cent increase in output from present facilities was forecast today by congressional leaders who unanimously backed the war production board's decision to taper off plant expansions in order to accelerate the immediate delivery of weapons.

Several senators predicted that the policy of channeling vital materials into ships, planes, tanks and guns instead of into new manufacturing facilities would bring a flood of protests from communities disappointed by the cancelling of plant contracts.

Senator Pepper (D., Fla.) said he had been informed that some aircraft factories could boost their output by 30 per cent, without additional machinery, if they were assured a maximum supply of materials.

The Federal Works administration disclosed that it was re-examining the 1,400 projects on its program with a view to halting work on any not deemed indispensable to the war effort.

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) cited one of the country's largest machine tool manufacturers whose plant capacity had been doubled since 1939 but who was producing five times as many tools as in that year.

There was a general feeling in congress that the WPB decision to concentrate on immediate rather than long-range production could be regarded as indicating there some hope of ending the war victoriously in 1943.

DIM-OUT MAKES A MODEST LADY OF GAY NEON-ROUGED BROADWAY

(By International News Service)

NEW YORK—Broadway wiped the neon rouge off its cheeks last night, turned off the lights and went to sleep—at dusk.

The great white way of the world was just a dark street cutting down through the heart of Manhattan island. It might have been Lovers' Lane back home to those people from everywhere who used to stand on streetcorners and gaze at the incandescent rainbow that was Broadway.

The show of the lights had rung down the curtain on the last act—Broadway was serious about the drastic new dim-out regulations that went into effect last night.

Even the normally pessimistic policemen beamed at the cooperation of the big and little men of the showmen's street. A radio patrolman summed it up when he said:

"Lady, it's wonderful!"

Neon signs, which sent their red beams 50 miles out to sea to silhouette our ships as enemy targets, were doused. "All exterior lighting used for advertising purposes . . . must be extinguished," the new dim-out order read—and Broadway proved it could read.

Theater signs, with their three-foot high letters outlined in lights, were still in place, but not a bulb. Lights only burned in the shaded space under the marquees—and in many instances those were dimmed. Restaurants which once shouted their wares in gaudy red and blue lights hoped that the public would still remember where they were located.

What few neon signs remained were shaded and policemen indicated they will be out soon even though their glare didn't project upwards. Broadway's dim-out wasn't a one night's stand; lights have been disappearing rapidly since the original dim-out order and the new regulations only hastened the process.

TRIAL PROCEEDS

Jurors See Vice Resort In Canton Murder Case.

CANTON—(INS)—The second-degree murder trial of Sadie Cook, 42-year-old colored woman, operator of a Canton vice resort, swung into its second day today, after a jury of eight women and four men had been shown through the lavishly-furnished resort.

Prosecutor A. C. L. Barthelmeh, in his opening statement to the jury and Judge Joseph L. Floyd, described the Cook woman as having led a "life of unlawful enterprise."

On Feb. 8 a group of six men came to her resort after a dance and an argument concerning money ensued. In the melee a single bullet from a .30-calibre rifle which the state charges was held by the Cook woman, killed Armando V. Gonzales, 27, and Nicholas Rossetti, 25, Canton steel workers. Defense attorneys indicated they would seek to show the resort operator acted in self defense.

HEART ATTACK ENDS IN DEATH

Mrs. George Christoff, 54, Dies at Home In Ashland.

ASHLAND—A resident of Ashland for 14 years, Mrs. George Christoff, 54, died at her home here early today. County Coroner George Emery said death was due to a heart attack.

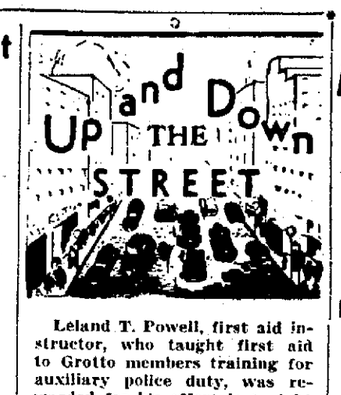
A native of Yugoslavia, Mrs. Christoff came to the United States 29 years ago.

She is survived by two sons, Boris of Ashland, and Carl, of London, O., and several brothers and sisters in Europe.

The body was removed to the Denbow-Bear funeral home. Funeral arrangements are incomplete.

Laff-a-Day

"There's the doorbell! Pop, for Pete's sake, please put on your jacket!"



Leland T. Powell, first aid instructor, who taught first aid to Grotto members training for auxiliary police duty, was rewarded for his effort last night but Mrs. Powell got the most benefit from the reward. Grotto members presented Powell with a $25 defense bond for his services but made the bond payable to Mrs. Powell just to prove, they explained, that Powell's frequent "nights out" were really due to the series of first aid lessons he presented for Grotto members.

There will be nothing prosy about the plans for the annual summer reading club sponsored by Mansfield Public Library for third to ninth grade pupils this year. The boys and girls will take the name of Treasure Island club and go adventuring into books that will bring them "golden nuggets" in the form of special recognition on the Treasure Island map. The "nuggets" will denote the number of written reports of books read during the season. Miss Myra Lorimer, children's librarian, is in charge of arrangements.

Mansfield's program to remove abandoned street car rails from city streets has rid Mansfield motorists of a traffic hazard and at the same time gave the Empire Sheet and Tin Plate company more than 100 tons of scrap steel for war production. The steel was only a small percentage of the amount removed by the Pollak Steel company of Cincinnati and Marion, and was composed mostly of switches, steel ties and plates. The Pollak company is converting the rails into steel plate being used by several plants in Mansfield and other Ohio cities for war production.

Pupils in Mansfield schools are not going to be cheated out of a holiday even if Memorial day does come on Saturday this year. The board of education last night authorized dismissal of schools at noon Friday, May 29, giving pupils an extra long week-end. Supt. W. L. Miller said the schools can take a half-holiday and still complete the term with 180 days of classwork, the minimum required by the state.

PLAN DROPPED

But U. S. Still Might Ration Citizen's Spending Money.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— The individual spending money of Americans may be rationed later, depending on developments, treasury officials indicated today, but at least for the present such a plan has been abandoned to give President Roosevelt's seven-point anti-inflation program a trial.

A treasury spokesman and other officials said that the proposal for rationing individual spending money was considered by the treasury and other government agencies when surveys were being made of all kinds of anti-inflation possibilities before Mr. Roosevelt decided on his seven-point plan.

The treasury spokesman indicated he saw no prospect for revival of the plan but cautioned that later events might cause it to be given further study.

APPORTIONING OF SUPPLIES BY U. S. SEEN

New Agency Would Allocate Foodstuffs to Army, Navy and Allies.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—Creation of a war food administrative body within the near future was predicted today by responsible government officials.

Whether the agency would be an independent group or a part of the agriculture department, the War Production Board or some other department remained to be decided.

One plan called for appointment by Donald M. Nelson, WPB chairman, of a committee headed by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard which would be responsible for stimulating agricultural output and apportioning it to meet the growing needs of the army, navy and the United Nations.

It was estimated the armed forces and lend-lease would require 20 to 25 per cent of next year's production.

It was said lend-lease supplies would be allocated both as to food and as to countries, and supplies available for domestic consumption would be certified to the Office of Price Administration for allocation.

The proposed Wickard committee, it was understood, would leave the actual handling of food supply problems to the existing agencies best suited to handle them—mainly in the agriculture department.

The agriculture department would carry on the food-for-freedom drive now under way, and would control prices through its agricultural marketing administration and commodity credit corporation; WPB would have responsibility for the supply of farm machinery, fertilizers and processing equipment, the board of economic warfare would allot exports among the United Nations.

This plan was "purely tentative" and bound to be altered in some degree, WPB sources said.

Art Thomas, the hot-shot Orange St. Cafe kegler, says it was a secret for a while, but it's all right to give out with the news now.

Art is the new athletic and recreational director at the big Plum Brook ordnance plant near Sandusky. He went to Plum Brook a month ago, working in the safety department until the recreational program opened up.

Art was in town Sunday trying to line up a few ball players, and book games for his baseball and softball teams.

The job is nothing new for Art who once held a similar post in the U. S army, and later coached at Shiloh.

Thomas says he has some pretty good athletes at Plum Brook, including Johnny Bettridge, the old Ohio State football flash from Sandusky.

"Doc" Daugherty has promised to line up a good Mansfield softball team to meet Art's Plum Brooks, and also hopes to book an exhibition game at the ordnance plant for his Provident Loan girls.

"And I thought she could ride," wailed Ruth Whiteman. Provident rover, as she gingerly rubbed an ouchy back.

Whitie and Jean Herrick went horseback riding Sunday evening at the Providents' wiener roast at Scotty's place down by Mifflin. They went riding—for fully 20 feet. From there the steed loped on, all by itself.

Such a nice, gentle old plug it was, with a razor-edge spine and heavy hoof, you'd never think it would leave two gals in the lurch that way.

* * *

There was Herrick up in front with a hand full of bridle and Whitie riding on the rumble seat, and the first thing Jean says is "How do you guide this thing?"

"Just like an automobile," says a gal named Susie, from Akron.

So Jean proceeds to guide the thing like an automobile which isn't quite the way they teach you in riding academies. But it worked until they started to turn a corner. The plug makes a dash for an open shed door, and Herrick and Whitie come tumbling down together in the middle of the road.

(How's ya' back, Mary?)

"What do they call you for nicknames in New London?" I asked Alice Iceman, the Providents' new high school kid pitcher.

"Up there they call me Weezie," says she, "but they haven't got on to that here yet."

"What's with the Weezie?" I puzzle.

"That's for Louise, which is my middle name," she explains.

* * *

But the Providents who have such nicknames as Bucky and Scrammy and Pete, and things and inbetween time call everybody Mary may have other ideas.

Already I hear some of them calling the kid Al.

Shelby Softball Season Opened

SHELBY—Autocall Co defeated the Ohio Seamless Tube Co., 5 to 3, last night in the opening game of the Shelby Softball League Monday night at the Municipal Water Co diamond.

The Autocall Co., took an early lead and was never headed.

The next game in the league will bring the Shelby Salesbook Co. up against the Mansfield Provident Loan Co at 6.15 p. m. Wednesday at the field.

MICHIGAN TAKES DOUBLEHEADER

CHICAGO —(AP)— Michigan captured a doubleheader from Chicago yesterday and now needs only to win its two remaining games from Ohio State to claim the Big Ten baseball pennant.

The Wolverines belted the hapless Maroons, 16-1 in the opener but barely wrung out a 3-1 verdict in the second.

Connie Boosts Indians

Declares Cleveland Definite Contender.

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CONNIE MACK spoke at a dinner in Cleveland last night and, nice fellow that he is, asserted that the Indians are definite pennant contenders in the American league.

* * *

The timing of his remarks was faultless, because the Tribe has crept into a virtual tie with the New York Yankees for first place.

There is no question that 24-year-old Lou Boudreau has accomplished amazing things at Cleveland. The Tribe won 13 in a row at the end of April and when it went into a tailspin and lost half a dozen straight, he jolted it back to an upward plane that has brought seven triumphs in the last eight games.

Yesterday the Indians waylaid the Philadelphia Athletics with six-hit pitching by Chubby Dean and Joe Heving and a 14-hit attack led by Ken Keltner and Oris Hockett. The result was a 7-4 victory that boosted the Tribe within 13 percentage points of the Yanks. Actually the two clubs are even in games won and lost reckoning, but the Tribe has played two more than New York.

The Yankees were idle at St. Louis yesterday.

The Browns took advantage of their off day to return Babe Dahlgren, the itinerant infielder, to the Chicago Cubs on the grounds that there had been a misunderstanding as to what would happen if Dahlgren went into military service before the end of the season.

Philadelphia's defeat at Cleveland plunged the A's into the American league basement as the Chicago White Sox captured their seventh straight victory 7-5 at the expense of the Washington Senators.

John Rigney, Chicago's pitching mainstay, passed from civilian life into the ranks of the navy at the Great Lakes Training Station.

The Boston Red Sox downed the Detroit Tigers 4-2 with Jimmy Foxx providing the winning margin on a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

The Brooklyn Dodgers continued to burn up the National league, running their latest winning streak to seven games and increasing their first place margin also to seven by smothering the Chicago Cubs 4-1.

The St. Louis Cardinals shook off their scoring lethargy with a 16-4 triumph over the New York Giants. The Redbirds made 15 hits and bunched five runs in the second inning.

Redleg Boss Isn't Scared

Says Brooklyn Not as Tough as Its Record.

BOSTON—(AP)—Except for Lippy Leo Durocher of the Dodgers—who couldn't do it anyway—you'd think now would be just the right time for National league managers to keep mum.

But not Manager Bill McKechnie of the sixth-place Cincinnati Reds, who claims his Redlegs have found themselves and will challenge Brooklyn for the lead.

"The Dodgers aren't as good as their record," the graying deacon explains. "It's just that the rest of us clubs have collapsed thus far in our tilts with the Brooks. I still get a headache every time I think of the two games we handed them at home last month."

Junior Thompson's one-hitter is the only Redleg victory in five tries at the Dodgers, who, by winning 10 of their last 11, are seven games ahead of the pack—a bigger margin than they had any time last year.

With a fifth of the season gone, the 1940 world champions are off to a poorer start than last year—nine games back of first, batting the league's lowest and fielding the loop's worst with 50 errors in 30 games.

The Reds—the league's best fielding club in 1941—lost by errors four other games besides the two to Brooklyn. Shortstop Eddie Joost and Haas have averaged a misplay every 10 chances.

OWEN CATCHES UP WITH LADY LUCK

BROOKLYN —(AP)— Mickey Owen's luck last year wasn't too good, especially in the World series, where the Brooklyn catcher dropped a third strike that enabled the New York Yanks to win the game.

This year, however, he has been in the lineup 17 times and the Dodgers have won every game in which he caught.

Lorain Kegler Hits 1,476

Alex Black Gets 740 and 736 in Tourney.

Alex Black, former bowling alley operator from Lorain, could have been on his home alleys this past week-end instead of pitching in the Colony singles and doubles tournament, so much at home he was.

Blackie just blasted out a 740 in doubles and 736 in singles for an all-events of 1476. He leads the singles, but naturally, and paired with John Klares of Lorain, he paces the doubles with 1407.

* * *

Walter Wellman of Bucyrus won a $75 side bet with Hank Andorka, Lorain bowling alley owner, placing fifth in singles with 632, and pairing with Stan Shelley, Bucyrus, for second in doubles at 1303, while Andorka failed to place in either event.

No Mansfield kegler got into the select list in singles, but Orlie Grable and Carl Phillipon are third in doubles, and Jim Weems and Johnny Bernat seventh.

Stroh's Beers of Detroit hit every game over 1000 to defeat Mansfield Bissman Birdie Brands 3091 to 2891 in a special match.

Bucks, Wolves Enter Finals

Rate Co-Favorites For Big Ten Title.

ANN ARBOR, Mich.—(AP)—Ohio State and Michigan separated by one slender stroke rode into the final 36 holes of the Big Ten golf meet today as decided co-favorites with the Wolverine chances depending in large measure upon whether crisp-hitting Ben Smith could continue the sizzling pace he began yesterday.

* * *

Smith toured the 6,600-yard University of Michigan course in a one-under-par 71 second for a 36-hole aggregate of 146 and individual leadership.

* * *

His par-busting round also shoved the Michigan team up into first place with a four-man total of 612 strokes, just ahead of the Buckeyes, 613.

The Buckeyes' hopes rested heavily on long-driving Billy Gilbert, ordinarily their number one man, who slipped to 163 on opening day.

Ring Vet Dies

CHUCK WIGGINS

One of the best-known fighters in the ring in the early twenties, Charles (Chuck) Wiggins, playboy heavyweight, is dead in Indianapolis as a result of a skull fracture received in a stairway fall. Wiggins, 44, once was called by Jack Dempsey "the greatest street fighter that ever lived." Wiggins ring career extended through the years 1919-28.

Stand Out Among Big Ten's Best Stars

Outstanding Big Ten athletes in the track and field world this year are shown in action at the recent Western conference meet, which was won by Ohio State. Bob Hodgell of Wisconsin is tops in the high jump field, doing 6 feet 4 inches when the picture was snapped. Campbell Kane of Indiana is the middle distance ace and Dallas Dupre of Ohio State champion among the broad jumpers. Dupre has done 24 feet. Kane won both the mile and half-mile runs at the Big Ten meet.

SHORT SPORT STORY

Bob Stevens of the San Francisco Chronicle is authority for the tale of a sweet young thing in the San Diego ball park who was waiting for her escort to appear with some liquid refreshment. When the gent finally turned up he said he had been visiting the boys in the clubhouse. "How thrilling," exclaimed the S. Y. T., "let's go back and get a drink." The escort patiently explained that ladies can't go into baseball clubhouses and that no drinks were available there.

"I don't understand," the gal pouted "I got a drink in the clubhouse at Santa Anita last years."

The movie folks will have to do some quick work on the Columbia lot next month...Both "Smith of Minnesota," featuring Bruce Smith, and "The Spirit of Stanford," with Frankie Albert, have to be finished between the time the boys leave college and when the navy calls them for active service.

Dem Bums Threaten To Make Runaway Of National Race

By LAWTON CARVER

NEW YORK—(INS)—If you want to feel insulted try your hand at managing a major league baseball club other than the Brooklyn Dodgers. You work hard, you buy up some minor leaguers and draft a few players here and there and you figure everything is going to be all right.

* * *

The Dodgers? Them Bums were lucky last year to get a drop of rain-fall after a drought. You can't miss. You are the Cardinals with a very fine all around club, or the Reds with a great pitching staff, or the Pirates with Frisch goading you on, or the Braves with unknowns who blossom out under Stengel.

* * *

That's great isn't it? Everything is going to be all right, except them Bums right now are seven games in front in the National league. Sure you can laugh that off. This is only Tuesday, May 19. There's a hot June, a hotter July and a still hotter August coming up when class will tell. There are days ahead when rookies will finally fold because they have been going along on spring momentum and when veterans will fail because the weather is too hot.

But whatever you may think, the Dodgers did win the National league pennant last season and they are out there in front and winning this time.

They threaten to make a runaway of it. They threaten, in fact, to out-Yankee the Yankees by spreadeagling the field unless some of the rest get going quickly.

May I get this straight. I am not particularly a Dodger supporter. They are just another ball club as far as I am concerned. Mr. MacPhail, the president of the roster, and I have just a nodding acquaintance. I do not think they are terrific, and I think they have made some obvious blunders.

But if you want to feel insulted by your own ineptness try to outmaneuver MacPhail and the Dodgers. They're winning pennants with smartness and that still goes if they blow this one. They did win last year and they won't finish worse than second this time.

The difference between the Dodgers and the rest of the National league is that the Dodgers are trying to win pennants and make money. The rest are trying to make money and win pennants, in that order.

When MacPhail took over in Brooklyn he inherited one of the worst baseball clubs ever imagined by man. It couldn't do anything, much less win pennants. But somehow he got that pennant along with night baseball and other attractions that means money in the box office and there they stand today.

For the last few years the Dodgers have pursued a policy of reaching out and getting players they wanted—Dolph Camilli, Joe Medwick, Mickey Owen, Billy Herman, Arky Vaughan, and they have cashed in on a simple policy of trying to win games.

ALL SAME DIFFERENCE TO COLLEGE SLUGGER

MONTGOMERY, Ala.—(AP)— When Paul Armstrong, Montgomery's Southeastern league centerfielder, went to bat in the ninth at Anniston, Ala., he asked Manager Bill Cronin:

"Whatta you want me to do, bunt, hit it out of the park or what?"

"Hit it out of the park," Cronin told him.

"Okeh," Armstrong replied, stepped to the plate and planted the ball the other side of the fence.

Bowman Keeps League Lead

Hurlers Have Best of It In Grade Loop.

Bowman retained its position at the top of the grade school softball league last evening with a 12-0 victory over Hedges, but Newman kept pace in the undefeated class with an 8-4 win over Woodland.

Reynolds, Bowman flinger, let Hedges down with two hits.

Kissell of Prospect and Marks of Western tangled in a pitching duel in which each allowed only four hits, but Western made theirs count for a 3-0 victory.

* * *

And Novak let West Fifth down with four hits as Bushnell won 9-1.

Carpenter won a slugging battle from Brinkerhoff 15-11.

Simpson Wins Game In Ninth

South Side baseball club staged a 3-run rally in the ninth to take a 5-4 lead over Simpson Sunday afternoon at the Fairground, but back came Simpson in its half of the inning with two runs and the ball game, 6-5.

There are now four young ball clubs in the city, and efforts are being made to organize them for league play.

All Set For Softball Tilt

Preparations Complete For Auditors Game.

Preparations are all complete for the first big softball game of the season Sunday at 2:30 p. m. at Liberty park between Mansfield All-Stars and the famous Ferguson State Auditors of Columbus.

* * *

Sponsored by the American Legion in the "smokes for soldiers" campaign, the Legion will have its drum corps on hand, and Mayor Bill Locke will toss out the first ball.

Everyone connected with the game is donating his services, although the Auditors need a trip-covering guarantee for their appearance.

Umpires who'll work for nothing are Gyp Miller, Kenny Ross, Johnny Gross and Bob Young. Joe Frisch is putting the diamond in shape and arranging for a loud speaker.

Lena Aston has been named chairman of the collection committee, and is arranging to have 10 women, most of them wives of the ball players, help her pass the hat.

Last year a fair-sized crowd paid 50 cents to see the Auditors perform at the Fairground, and there's no reason why just as large a crowd can't chip in enough to make this game a success.

If it should prove a success, plans are being considered to keep the all-star team together for other games this summer, with the next game on the slate probably being with the state champion Page Dairies of Toledo in two weeks.

Socko Secory Really Does

Timely Hitting Sinks Toledo Mud Hens.

(By Associated Press)

You probably will hear a lot about Frank (Socko) Secory, Milwaukee's new outfielder, before the American association season is tucked away.

The lad broke the Toledo Mudhens into little pieces in the last two days with timely blows that drove in seven runs to give Milwaukee victories.

Last night, Secory again came to the rescue, getting his third double in two days and a tremendous homer. The two hits swept in five tallies and gave the Brewers a 10-7 decision.

* * *

The Kansas City Blues kept astride the leadership with an 8-5 assault of Columbus. Johnny Neun's club sent Red Munger to the showers in the sixth with a three-run rally, and in all collected a dozen blows off Munger, Preacher Roe and Frank Gabler, with ex-footballer Eric Tipton setting the pace with three-for-five. Munger was charged with the loss, his first of the season after four wins.

The Louisville Colonels hit the jackpot for a 2-1 win over stubborn St. Paul in 11 innings.

Minneapolis' game at Indianapolis was postponed.

Ban Night Games In East

All-Star Tilt July 6 Tossed Into Confusion.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Night baseball has been banned in New York City for the duration of the war and now everybody is wondering what will become of the first all-star game scheduled for the Polo Grounds the night of Monday, July 6.

President Ford Frick said he expected Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis to call an early meeting of the advisory council, which includes Frick and President Will Harridge of the American league, to consider the matter.

The winner of the game between the National and American league all-stars will oppose a team of army and navy stars at Cleveland Tuesday night, July 7. Wednesday has been made an open date in both major leagues to allow for postponements and one solution to the New York difficulty may be to push both all-star struggles back a day to Tuesday and Wednesday.

The night baseball ban, pronounced by Police Commissioner Lewis J. Valentine yesterday, wiped out 28 games scheduled by the New York Giants and Brooklyn Dodgers.

Murder On the Avenue

By Carolyn Wells

(Copyright, 1942.)

CHAPTER XIII

Hugh left the room and the detective awaited the reappearance of the formidable Scotch woman.

"Good morning, again, Miss Emmy," Raynor said, as she came in.

"Good morning, sir. You want to see me?"

"Yes; I'm just hoping you are able to tell me about what time your brother came up to your apartment, shortly before the attack on Mrs. McCleod."

"I doubt that I can tell you exactly what you ask."

"As nearly as possible, then. Can't you tell me the times you had to give medicine to your patient, or something of that sort."

"Yes, I gave my father his drops at three o'clock, and Hugh came up right after that. It must have been about five or ten minutes after three. Will that help you?"

"Very much—if you are sure."

"Yes, I'm sure . . . And, look here, I am afraid I did my sister-in-law an injustice. I didn't like her, but I don't want to misjudge her. I told you my brother never gave her that little old coin. I believed she stole it from him. But Hugh tells me he did give it to her, so I tell you about it now. You see, Hugh was so mad about her, he would have given her the half of his kingdom and then the other half."

"She was very beautiful."

"She was more than that—she had charm, the siren's charm."

"Do you know which of the young men she liked best?"

"Oh, Mr. Herrick, I think; and I'll tell you why. Just because she couldn't bring him to her feet! He admired her, of course, but it was in a respectful, courteous way."

"She must have liked that."

"Not she! She wanted him to make love to her, as the others did or tried to."

"Now who do you think gave her that new bracelet she was wearing. Would it be Mr. Herrick?"

"Oh, no. He is not a rich man, and that is really a beautiful bangle. And too, Mr. Herrick has his own ideas of what is proper. I don't believe he would give jewels to any man's wife. Hugh gave me that bracelet. I am very glad to have it."

"Was Mr. McCleod up here a long time that night, before Dickson came for him?"

"Oh, yes, nearly an hour I'd say. Father was very ill, you know. We thought he'd slip away that time. It's a constant strain, you see, not knowing how long he can live."

"Miss McCleod, do you know any of these young men who made up your sister's crowd?" Raynor asked Emmy.

"My sister-in-law, please. Why, yes, I have met them all. I always insist on knowing all the people that come to the house. Which ones do you mean?"

"Do you know Martin Delevan?"

"He's the bad one. I think that man is the only really bad man I have ever met."

"What do you mean by bad?"

"Wicked, vicious, wrong-hearted, wrong-souled!"

"You must know him well, to judge him so thoroughly!"

"I do not know him well. I judge from his face. I am a reader of physiognomy, I know a bad face when I see it."

"Do you know anything of his character except what you read in his face?"

"Only what Alma has told me. She thought him a dilettante, and a ne'er do well."

"Do you think him capable of having killed her?"

"Capable, yes. But he had no motive. He was not in love with Alma, he rather despised her."

"Now how do you know that?"

"I saw them together a few times. I am a seeing woman, Captain Raynor."

"I believe you. What of the others? Are they all capable of murder? Haynes, Murray, Herrick?"

"Every human being is capable of murder, given sufficient reason and chance."

"These young men all had the chance, but did they have a reason?"

"Passionate or violent love is motive enough for any young person."

"Tell me whom you think most likely."

"Not the Delevan man and not the Murray one. Though he is bad, it is in a sordid way. I believe he gets money from Alma on false promises."

"Then Herrick and Haynes are left."

"Yes, it was one of them. I don't know which one."

"Why are you so sure?"

"Elimination. And they are the ones who were most devoted to Alma."

"I have been told that Mr. Herrick was not so devoted as the others!"

"Nadine Glenn told you that, then. She cares a lot for Brand Herrick, and so does Doris Day. You must know it pleased Alma's vanity to see how she could cut out all those girls with her superior charms. I have seen them writhe under it. She was a Circe."

"You didn't like her?"

"I can't say that. She made my brother very happy, and she was true to him in heart, word and deed. Alma was a coquette, but she never said a word that Hugh might not have listened to."

"How can you know this so positively? To my mind our whole search is for her lover."

"Then you're on the wrong track. Alma never had a lover. She liked the men because their flattery pleased her vanity, but in so far as she was capable of love it was all for Hugh. If Alma had been untrue to Hugh in the least particular I should have known it."

"And would you have told him?"

"Most assuredly."

"Then why was your sister-in-law killed?"

"She was killed by some man who was deeply in love with her, and who had no intention of such a thing, but who smothered her in a mad wave of passion to which she could not or would not respond."

The dour face of the spinster looked sibylline. Raynor was deeply impressed with what was surely insight if nothing more subtle.

"I think you must be right," said Raynor, slowly "Indeed, I think there can be no other rational conclusion. No other tenable theory. Do you suppose Mr. McCleod would agree to that?"

"I don't advise mentioning it to him. If it is correct and you can prove it, and can find the man who did it, then it will be time enough to tell Hugh. You ought to get all your suspects together and make them tell in what order they went into that room."

"I doubt if they'd know. They seem to be devoid of knowledge and memory when one begins to question them."

"You must make them tell. Don't let up until they do. Of course they remember! That forgetting is all pretense. Make them tell."

"Shall I collect the lot, and bring them here for questioning?"

"Yes, do. And let me be present. I can help you and I promise I will not offend."

"I think I'll get them here—but I'm not sure of allowing you to be with us."

"Of course I shall be there. And I'll make Hugh stay up with father. He mustn't be with us."

"Tomorrow evening, then."

Emmy McCleod was enjoying herself. She had told her brother that she would look over Alma's belongings and decide what to do with the clothing and all the folderol that cluttered the boudoir and dressing-room.

"You know, Hugh," she said, "you would be perfectly helpless in this matter. I shall use my superior wisdom and judgment, and I will give away the things where they will do the most good. There is practically nothing that I can use myself, and very few garments that are appropriate for Linda or Netta. The jewelry, of course, is yours. I like the bangle you gave me, but the other pieces are too elaborate for my use. You'd better sell them. You're too old to marry again, and I hope to heaven, you won't flirt around with loose women. I shall take care of you, and—"

"Oh, Emmy, let me alone! Dispose of Alma's wardrobe as you see fit, but don't try to manage my life for me!"

Hugh seldom spoke sharply to his sister, but when he did, Emmy recognized the situation and accepted it.

Moreover, she took his irritation to mean that he would do as he pleased about his lady friends, and with the quick suspicion of a spinster whose ignorance made her imaginative, she visioned her brother in secret dissipations to distract his mind from his sorrow.

Yet after his sudden angry speech, she dared not annoy him further and she talked of other things. But with all her generalship Emmy found her task of looking over Alma's things more arduous than she expected. There were so many gowns and cloaks and hats, so much lingerie and such quantities of accessories, many of which she didn't even know the use of, that she was glad to have Linda's help and advise.

Hugh himself, had cannily taken all the contents of Alma's desk and any other letters or papers that either he or Linda could find, but to his great satisfaction he found no incriminating screeds and discovered no secret interests in Alma's life.

Hugh had loved the beautiful woman with a single-hearted devotion, that was sometimes dumb before her fascinating charm. He was like a big adoring dog, to whom his master is all the world. He had never chided her for her flirtations, feeling that she wanted and needed young friends, and always certain that whatever she did was right.

Alma knew and understood his attitude perfectly, and though flirtations was a mild word for her affairs, she had never been moved to real love for any man, least of all her husband. Her only happiness lay in excitement, whether of an innocent sort, or something less admirable. And her natural reserve and her innate cleverness protected her from criticism.

So Hugh found new notes or other proofs of Alma's meeting with other men, though many such had occurred. And what Linda knew, she had no intention of telling.

Hugh had asked the maid to stay until Alma's things had been looked after, and Linda had sense enough to manage Miss McCleod with amity.

This resulted in what looked like enough clothing to last the girl for the rest of her natural life, beside a lot of valuable articles which the astute Linda could dispose of profitably.

Hugh, himself, was in a dark quandry. He could not face daily life with his sister, for though he loved her she was most trying to him. Yet he could not go away and leave her and their dying father alone.

He treated the detectives with courtesy and patience, and expressed a willingness to help but they observed that the horror of Alma's death was eclipsed by his own despairing grief.

Twenty-four hours sufficed Captain Raynor for arranging what he called, to Sergeant Colby, his Round-up, and then, Hugh was informed, a session would be held in the room where the murder took place.

He'll Always Look to You for Guidance and Security

In a child's eyes, gazing up into yours: in a child's hand clasped firmly in yours, is expressed the ultimate in faith. Those wide eyes trust you for guidance: that little hand accepts the hold of yours.

Such faith helps the child to learn, and to mature with its own sense of security . . . when you wisely guide it toward action and behavior which will result in happiness and satisfaction.

We all grow up—but we never outgrow our need for guidance in the many, many items we purchase daily. This guidance and faith is obviously found in Advertising . . . . Advertising promotes active competition between products—introduces new products effectively—compares qualities and values—establishes brand names—forces better merchandising and sales methods.

"Advertising is the most potent influence in adopting and changing the habits of life, affecting what we eat, what we wear, and the work and play of the whole nation." —Calvin Coolidge.

Thanks to Advertising we have all established a sense of buying security which results in our own happiness and satisfaction. ADVERTISING—the active force in maintaining our high standard of living.

LEADERS DROP SLIGHTLY LOWER ON SLOW MART

Price Changes Are Small With Scattered Resistance to Downward Trend.

NEW YORK —(AP)— Scattered spots of resistance were observed in today's stock market but many leaders coninued to exhibit a lower drift.

Fractional advances, in the majority at the opening, were cancelled in some cases near the second hour. Dealings remained on the sluggish side.

Aside from American Telephone, which dropped more than a point, price changes were exceptionally narrow.

Drawing mild support were Republic Steel, Goodrich, Boeing, N. Y. Central, Consolidated Edison, Kennecott, International Nickel, Union Carbide, Westinghouse and Eastman Kodak.

In arrears at times were Chrysler, Pennsylvania, United Aircraft, Dow Chemical and Phelps Dodge.

Potential bidders inclined to proceed carefully, brokers said, pending war developments and further light on domestic tax prospects. The dividend and earnings outlook still was a cloudy factor marketwise.

Defeat Looms For 'Farm Bloc' Over Grain Sale Plan

WASHINGTON—(INS)—For the first time in years the Roosevelt administration today appeared certain of victory over the senate "farm bloc," which is badly split in the battle centering on the parity price issue.

A vote is expected late today on the administration's proposal that it be permitted to sell corn and 125,000,000 bushels of wheat below the parity price—average of 1909—1914 farmer purchasing power—in order to provide cheap feed for producers of cattle and dairy products.

Angered by the proposal, some members from corn producing states planned to demand that the lid on sale of huge government-controlled surpluses be lifted entirely, thus putting on the administration the responsibility of maintaining prices on farm products.

The administration scored decisive victories over the senate "economy bloc" in battles on the farm bill yesterday.

CALLS EMPIRE PLAN 'MODEL'

Labor Officials Claim Union-Management Program Being Used By War Board.

officials and local union officers made it apparent that the only way this company could continue in business was through the fullest possible co-operation with its employes," SWOC officials declared.

They stated that the union local volunteered to turn back to the company a sizeable share of wages; that this was done for a 90-day period; that the company in turn granted the union security; and that, enabled to continue operation, the company repaid workers in a few months.

"It has been conservatively estimated that tangible savings of between $150,000 and $200,000 were effected during the first year," the report added. "The company has ended each year in the black since the plan was adopted. In 1941, a profit of $50,000 was earned.

"The War Production Board's program for labor-management production committees incorporate some of the principles which have been applied in our union-management plans. It seems reasonable to believe our record of success had a great deal to do with the WPB's decision to initiate management-labor committees."

Since first tried at Mansfield, the plan was reported to have worked successfully at the Pittsburgh Water Heater, the Fort Pitt Malleable, the Sweet's Steel Companies, and the Algoma Steel Corp., at Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. Canada.

Neither company nor Delano lodge officials were available locally for comment on the union's report, issued at Cleveland.

TELLS ABOUT CONVOY TRIP

Correspondent Describes How Fighting Ships Kept Off Sub Attacks.

bridge and the destroyer seemingly gathered itself for the lunge at full speed toward the contact spot.

Tense, hard-jawed blue-jackets scurried to their battle posts. A Dallas lieutenant pulled the lever releasing the depth charges.

"It was a good contact," said the destroyer's captain with a meaningful smile which indicated the joust was good only for us—not the submarine.

A soupy, swirling fog caused a Dutch merchantman sailing in the convoy to get lost. However, the ship arrived alone and unscathed only a day late.

Steaming on the British side of the Atlantic all the ships were doubly on the alert for a possible air attack. The naval men donned steel helmets and manned anti-aircraft guns ready to oppose the foe. Since the enemy had failed to halt the convoy by means of submarine attacks it was felt that he would not be beyond trying other methods.

Upon the safe arrival in port, the game little destroyer's captain received from the flagship the best reward a naval man can receive, a message stating "well done."
